DEDICATION

Dr. Alice Springer

Those of us who have studied under Dr. Springer might have heard her say: "A little well-placed fear is always good motivation." In Dr. Springer's case, it's not fear of the teacher, but fear of letting her down and not meeting her high expectations that pushes us to do our best. In her classes, students learn to think independently and discover as much about themselves as they do the class material. Dr. Springer never ceases to inspire her students with stories about her life, which often serve as starting points for class discussions. With tales of her travels to Latin America and Spain, and memories of her childhood in Southern Florida and Honduras, Dr. Springer brings her classroom to life and exalts her students to take an enduring interest in the Spanish language and its culture. Because Dr. Springer understands her students so well, she knows exactly how to get them to perform at a high level. She frequently humors them with her blunt honesty and frank opinions of society and humankind. As chair of the foreign language department, a class sponsor, head of the Service Club, a published writer, a worthy member of Totomoi, and more, Dr. Springer has proven to be an invaluable resource to Montgomery Bell Academy. Nobody could ask anything more of Dr. Springer, but she continues to give herself selflessly to the school. Even when met with trying circumstances that would drive most teachers into retirement, Dr. Springer continued to teach her classes without a single complaint. Thank you Dr. Springer for your twenty-three years of dedication to the school and everything you have done for your students throughout the years.

The Art of Poetry

— Jorge Luis Borges

To gaze at a river made of time and water and remember Time is another river.
To know we stray like a river
and our faces vanish like water.

To feel that waking is another dream that dreams of not dreaming and that the death
we fear in our bones is the death that every night we call a dream.

To see in every day and year a symbol of all the days of man and his years, and convert the outrage of the years
into a music, a sound, and a symbol.

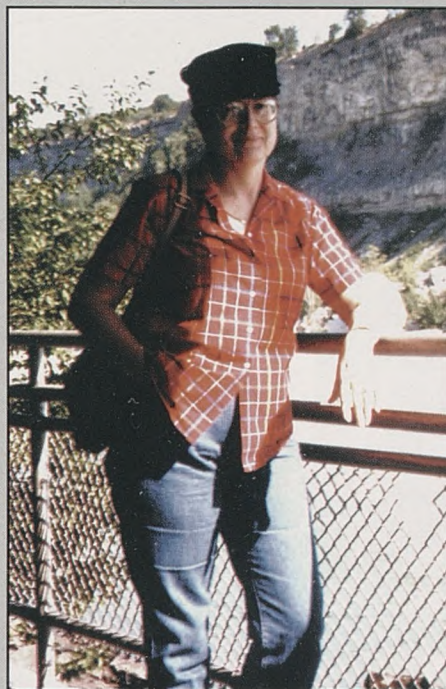

To see in death a dream, in the sunset
a golden sadness—such is poetry, humble and immortal, poetry,
returning, like dawn and the sunset.

Sometimes at evening there's a face that sees us from the depths of a mirror.
Art must be that sort of mirror,
disclosing to each of us his face.

They say Ulysses, wearied of wonders, wept with love on seeing Ithaca, humble and green. Art is that Ithaca,
a green eternity, not wonders.

Art is endless like a river flowing, passing, yet remaining, a mirror to the same inconstant Heraclitus, who is the same and yet another, like the river flowing.

— Translated by Anthony Kerrigan

If I am friends with you, then you know what quotations I would put into this bio (OHHHH REALLY?!). But six years here has really gotten me thinking... we entered MBA as mere impressionable youth. MBA taught us about a certain balance: "Gentleman, Scholar, Athlete". Whether we're gentlemen, scholars, athletes, all three, two out of three, or none, we all had something to contribute to the school. Every student ought to realize that he has affected MBA; whether it's some sort of humor he has provided to his friends at the lunch table or the garnering of some State Championship, each student has left his mark. I want to acknowledge my best friends from MBA: Paul, JB, James, Whitney, Richard, Ray, Josh, and Matt. You are what I will remember from high school. You guys all left an influence on me and certainly on the school with all your unique gifts and talents. "Unique". In senior English, Mr. Gioia taught us this year that "unique" is such a descriptive word that it need not be modified for superlative or comparison by such words as "very" or "more"; it stands alone. We the students at MBA all stand alone as unique Gentlemen, Scholars, and Athletes. MBA taught us well. Take time to think how MBA has shaped you for the better, but also never fail to realize how you have changed MBA for the best.

Brent Collins

My canned answer these four years when people have asked me how MBA was has always been, "It's high school," with a customary shrug of feigned indifference to dismiss the topic. It's easier that way, I decided, and still quite true. But so much of my high school career I bore the superfluous ceremonies and characters with clinched fists in my pockets. To and from class I spent most of my walks concentrating on my shoes and I was typically drawn to the quiet, simple and misunderstood. The initial bitter taste remained far after I had reconciled the school to my mind and even after I had found good things and wonderful people there. What was it that had made its place in my mind that I would hold on to for so long? Ah, teenage melodrama, my old friend! Come in, come in, my old friend and let's reminisce - I remember days without food and sleep. The weather was with me in those days. When it was bitter cold, I felt nothing and my body was like a tomb. When the wind tilted the rain, I was brittle and easily overcome with emotion. The days poured on over the nights and on to the days as I divided my time between homework and dreading homework, and all the while great frustration brewed in me and I mourned day and night for the loss of free time. Naturally I resisted the process of becoming myself at school, but in time bitterness desisted and more and more I spoke with people and laughed. And at the milestone early in Junior year when I found my reflection outside the mirror (far outside), I began to slowly embrace the process. Now as an awkward, young fellow (still somewhat of a Displaced Person), I look on the establishment I once so avidly detested and smile with the due measures of gratitude and of resentment. It was only high school after all.

Martha P. Thurmond used to say, "I come out of the closet and all I hear is jabba jabba jabba." Here is my jabba: I survived Mrs. Thurmond, IPS, and dodged Ricky Bower's erasers long enough to live to my eighth grade year to humiliate myself by asking if there was going to be an essay on Mr. Woosley's math exam. I AM A SCHOLAR. Here's what I achieved and learned about my athletic ability or lack thereof: Intramurals(7th): a runny-nosed seventh grader; Lacrosse(8th): learning to whack people to death; Debate(9th): was a master novice debater with M-hoss; Track(9th & 10th): making fun of Walker; watching Denbo spin and stutter and speak in Iambic Hexameter; Burt Hoover acting like an old man; and fearing the Don and making Guan laugh so hard he almost chucked a discus backwards at my head; good times; Football(summer10th): for three days(I quit the team and MBA ended their four-year state championship streak; coincidence, I think not); Soccer(11th): for the love of the game, kicking balls at Peaches, kicking Matthew B., and for coach K, a true teacher, coach, and friend; Weights and Whining(running)(10th, 11th, 12th): to get a buff body; to make Coach Wims proud; my FIGHT with Wilson and landing his buttox in a sand pit from a charge from lane 5; runs to Elmington and Shanley's conspiracies...my athletic career. I AM AN ATHLETE. I have learned to respect my peers and teachers and appreciate them all, even the rare sane ones. Releaf Nashville; planted a tree with Colin in the wrong spot; Soup Kitchen (11th & 12th) is what I live for; Sergeant Shanley and his squeaky clean commandos; "let's get to squeak'n, cause if it ain't squeak'n it ain't clean"; I only spent $5 at homecoming Junior year and forgot to put money in my wallet my senior year. I AM A GENTLEMAN Key to famous lines and phrases: M-hoss: blue bunny; Lane: Lanoos, inane Lane; "Don't call me Dale, Smither or Spooner...thanks Lane for always getting me in trouble with Mr. Tillman, Mike Caldwell and Mrs. Orth and in all the endless math classes and study halls that we endured; Mike Caldwell: "HI"; "Hunter, I don't like you, get out of my class"; "my favorite number is PI"; Peaches: "How's Rebecca?"; "How's Jess?"; Jim Bryant: jimmy jim jimmy jim jimmy jim jim thanks for making me laugh; Dr. Clark: thanks for such a fun year in Physics; shoot the Kamikaze Monkey Project will go cross campus when I come back as an old rich guy; "It's not rocket science, wait it is"; "things don't touch"; "the proof is in the pudding"; "woooooorrrrk is being done"; last class to ride in the 1980 Brown Dodge Aspen; Shanley: the Bob Saggot Memorial Foundation for the Blind and Hearing Impaired and all your other conspiracies and gestapo soup; Matthew Brinton: thank you for calling me a religious fanatic and for loving me deep down in underneath your Napoleonic Complex; Jimmy Love: Yes I do have a hot girlfriend Jimmy; I'm getting married?; Mr. Tillman: Tilldawg, you are MBA; I would like to think Mrs. Power, Mrs. Morrissey, Mrs. Patrick, and the rest of the Administration for all the times I have lost books, shoes, and locker combinations; ya'll were extremely patient; Thank You Teachers and Advisors.

Dr. Cassel's stupid monkey must be in tune (brush hair straight back so that it stands straight up); Everyone must pay homage to hamage with cabbage or be smote; Eating moonpies in Mr. Elliot's CA/ Trig class; ghetto slovakians with 4 foot afros love to take rides in cruises; Crispy Creme and Burger King just don't mix- it just isn't Richael or Rimlton or Rirk or Rimby; Everyone in 1st period study hall must report on the activities of the night before; Pizza with Jimby and Scotown and Fritzter; ooohhhh!!! Rob Delaney!!!!; Who could forget the great partiage of high school? Definitely not Fritzzy and Jimber. They had a BET on that. Definitely not Hamilton. He wore a brown suit twice to school functions and regretted that for the rest of high school. He, influenced the advice of Jimby, would never wear the brown suit again- or for that matter any other suit more than once.

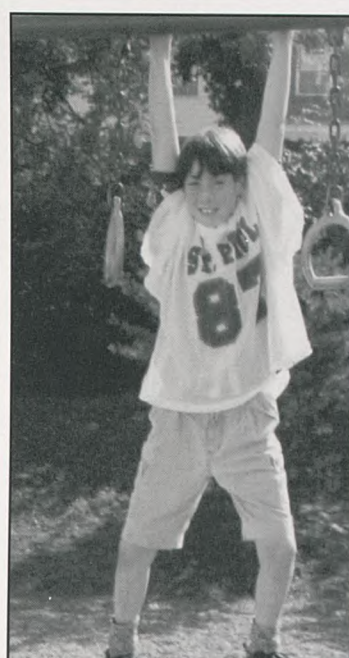

As a senior getting ready to leave MBA, I would like to leave the underclassmen with a few thoughts. Take advantage of what you have while you have it. The father of my very good friend just died, and she helped me to put a couple of things in perspective. You are in a great position at MBA, and you have just about everything at your fingertips if you put enough effort into it. MBA provides you with the resources to pursue just about any field you choose, from outing club trips to music to astronomy. This may be the last time you have the time to focus your energy toward your studies. You have a place to sleep, food to eat, clothes to wear, and most of you don't have to worry about a job yet. If you think it will be easier to do what you want or study what you want after MBA, consider that you will be on your own, and consider that you will also have to take care of yourself. You have a lot right now. Make the most of it.

From Treasure Island to Paradise Lost, my years at MBA have presented me with challenges, words of encouragement, and still unanswered questions. After six years of attending this unique school, I can say that I am still changing every day. I don't know how much one place or one group of people in particular can actually influence a person's growth, but I am sure that, after my experiences here, I have become an entirely different person than that unsure seventh grader who walked into Massey Hall six years ago. Whether it was an American novelist, an English poet, the study of the Environment, my involvement in Theater and Chorus, or simply the relationships that I have formed while here, there has always been at least one thing at MBA that I could say was interesting, one thing that I could say was fun, and one thing that I could say I would never do again. I think my most profound moments have been a product of my English classes and teachers, but every person I have encountered on campus has pushed me in some way. My language classes have taught me how to look at the same world from a different point of view. My involvement in the arts has breathed new life into many a dull night, and the friends that I have made have all taught me to never stop asking myself who I am and what I can do for others. Thank you MBA. I won't forget what I have learned.

THE SINGULARITY

I am no more myself, but someone else.
I am forced to see myself differently.
I find myself
Circular.
My vision wanders over others that I know
And then back
I am much changed from what I was. There is No doubt that those who look upon me now
See the subtle differences of ME
Like reeds in wind and water we are all
Bent to the this one fate;
We have come so far together

Will Brian and Vamsi make it to Japan?
Will Joverton become president?
Will Vivek annihilate Pakistan?
Will Dave ever be un-shady?
Will Newman ever find purpose for his prose?

We are the Singularities Bound by no limit other than Ourselves

I am that Singularity
I am what I have pulled in
And I am what I have given out.

I am Stephen Hawking's prophecy
The event horizon takes bits and pieces and
In return gives more

To take emptiness and give mass
To take meaninglessness and give meaning is me
I am choices
I find that myself is not any longer what I would Choose but that I would choose it.

I have taken much from my time here
I have bent toward this one goal
My aspirations all bend toward it.
Arts, Sciences, Literature, Composition, Mathematics,

All these masses are bent toward me and I am Bent toward them.

All my knowledge is that knowledge is not to be gained alone
Whether Mrs. Paschall's enthusiasm Whether Mr.

Coverstone's pragmatic activism
Whether the conglomeration of Quotations
"That's old-fashioned Communism!"
Or the Passive Saturation with Learning in W15

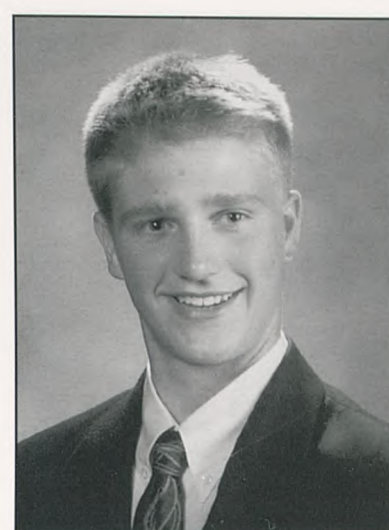

Whether the vast experience of Dr. Crowell or others,

Or Mr. Womack's puns on Art History's 442nd Slide
Whether in the discussions with my friends
Or in the disputes with my enemies,

I do not know yet if I may shine like all Singularities in Aeons to come, But I do know

I am these people's memories and they are mine
And to them and by them do I shine.

Hunter Foreman

Being one of 600 students at a single-gender school does not seem like a breeding ground for pensive minds. If not for the dedication of teachers, then my failure would have been inevitable. Fortunately, M.B.A. is a school that invests carefully in its teachers. In six years, I have been a part of some thought provoking classrooms. Mr. Klausner, Mr. Kelly, Dr. Fuller, Dr. Marro, Mr. Threalkill, and Mrs. Paschall have all taken a candid interest in me. Their efforts in the classroom are just as significant as their efforts out of the classroom. To me, these teachers understand fully how to craft and exploit the mind for learning. I am indebted to you.

My interest in writing and literature began at M.B.A. On my own volition, I have studied literature outside of school. Many words I have found better than my own. Allen Ginsberg eloquently captures my thoughts: "Observe what's vivid. Notice what you notice. Catch yourself thinking."

The reader may enjoy experimenting with the 12 pentominoes (all patterns of five rookwise-connected counters) to see what happens to each. He will find that six vanish before the fifth move, two quickly reach a stable pattern of seven counters and three in a short time become traffic lights. The only pentomino that does not end quickly (by vanishing, becoming stable or oscillating) is the R pentomino. Its fate is not yet known, but, after 460 moves, it has thrown off a number of gliders. It has left a lot stagnating around and has only a few small active regions, so it is not at all obvious if it will continue indefinitely. After 48 moves it has become a figure of seven counters on the left and two symmetric regions on the right which, if undisturbed, would grow into a honey farm (four beehives) and traffic lights. The honey farm, however, gets eaten into pretty quickly and the four blinkers forming the traffic lights disappear one by one into the rest of a rather blotchy population.

The accepted rules of Life: (1) A dead cell with three living neighbors becomes alive. (2) A dead cell with less than or more than three living neighbors remains dead. (3) A living cell with two or three living neighbors remains alive. (4) A living cell with less than two or more than three living neighbors dies.

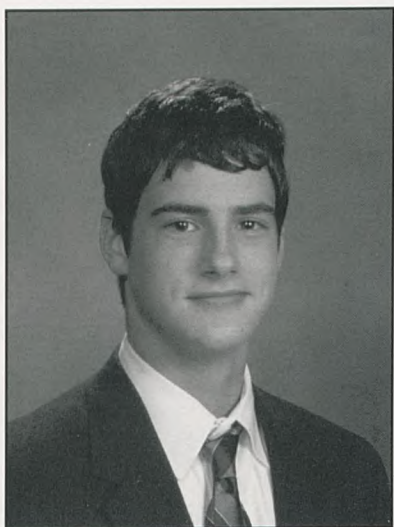

But the pieces of this nascent automata must reject simple stasis, and thus are experiences a necessity -- to relate a few: copious amounts of Sierra Mist; disoriented late night runs to the Corner Market for Moose Tracks; Jackson, the porch, and the barn... Vahid, Jackson, Alec, Brian x2, Chris x2, Josh, Matthew, David, John, Ben, Vivek, and the rest of you jokers -- it's been interesting. How can I thank you for what you've made high school for me? Kk, give me a smile and shiny days. Kowareru hodo aishitemo sanbun no ichi mo tsutawaranai. Mom, Dad, Anna -- it's over for now, at least?

Less than three hours from leaving for India -- I suppose it's time to pack.

Take care of yourself, dear Reader!

In coming into the seventh grade, I had no idea of what to expect. I thought that there was no way that I would make it through the year, much less six of them. Thankfully, my seventh grade teachers, as well as everyone since then, helped me get through the year by being ready to help in any way they could. Also, ever since I was eight years old, football was something I did every fall and loved it, but at the end of my sophomore year I decided to take a break. And I felt awful for doing it. Therefore, I played my senior year, and it is the best thing that I ever did. Now that I am a senior and am looking back on my career here, I cannot believe how far I have come as a student as well as a person. It was definitely a team effort to get me where I am. And thanks to my family, friends, teachers, and coaches.

Now the good stuff. For everyone who wrote '03 off as the worst class ever, you never really knew us. For those that believed in us and helped us I give my deepest thanks. I have never been around a more entertaining, caring, intelligent, and talented group of people. For every bad thing one of us did, a hundred good things were done without acknowledgement. A message to all underclassmen from now until this school closes: Be true to yourself and let no person stop you or say you're not good enough. MBA is a great place to begin to find yourself. Thank you Mr. Kelly and Mr. Coverstone for teaching me the value of great teachers. Thank you, Dr. Fuller, for helping me to find myself. Thank you Mom, Dad, Lindsay, Amy, and all of my friends, you are my greatest teachers. And before I forget, HAVE A NICE DAY!

Thanks out to Peter and Chris, for being the best friends I could ask for. To Bibb, for getting me in, I'll never forget it. To Jax, Josh, and Erika, for giving me a chance to step up. To MDV, for sharing a little of your wisdom. To Rachel, for your love of life. To Dad, for persistence and having faith in me. To Mom, for your strength and love. To God, for dealing with me and my big head. You're a pretty cool guy when I think about it. To Me, don't be a cranky old man. "And the Lord said, 'whom shall I send, and who will go for us?' And I said, 'Here am I, send me.'" - Isaiah 6:8. And to the guys who come through later, don't take this place too seriously or it'll get to you. Some day, you'll be happy you went through it, I promise.

So here's to the ones who try to sing
And always wonder what days may bring

Thanks to everyone whom I met while I was here. This has been one of the greatest experiences of my life, and I'm going to remember it forever. I appreciate all of the time and energy that all of my teachers have put in. I feel that I actually know how to learn now. I think I have enjoyed every class that I have been in, from Mr. Russell's first period seventh-grade English class to Mr. Caldwell's calculus bc class (which I hope I'm still in when this is printed). Coming the first day for class, I remembered the days of all sports camp when I was about seven years old. It was just like waiting for the day of camp to start; I knew a very few people from baseball or something, but the day was always exciting and fun after it got started. The coaches that I have had here have also shown me that although dedication to their activities is important, school comes before them, which was a lesson that I needed to have taught to me, but above all comes my family and those around me. Although I have pretty much committed, as Mr. Russell said the first day of class, "every minute of my life to this school" while I've been here, I have grown and learned tremendously. I would like to thank my mom and my grandfather for helping to put me through here, and I am thankful that I have made the most out of it. Thanks to everyone.

David McNamee

My experience at MBA has been to defy categorization, despite the simplicity offered in a narrow self-image. I am not the MBA stereotype. I wear neither boots nor khakis. I refuse to objectify women. I consider myself a progressive in a heavily conservative environment. Yet my opposition does not take the form of reactionary militancy, for I have grown to love MBA and feel a part of an incredible senior class. Part of my maturation has been to realize that the people around me are just as much individuals and not stereotypes as I myself am.

My hope is that in this reflection I will not mischaracterize myself despite the space constraints, for there are many foundations for whom I have become. I am a Debater. The building down below the library, lurking in the deep underbelly of the campus, has been a safe haven to me for four years. The late nights working and the tournaments attended have not been hours wasted or mere tickets out of school, they have been crucibles of competition and learning and a pool of countless memories. Vivek, Joe, Fing, Cov, Mr. Tate, all the squad - you guys have been great to me. I am a Scout. I am a Philosopher. I am a Filmmaker. I am a Student. My drive to learn has motivated me to great heights, but I would be nowhere without my environment. To Benji, Brent-show, Ray, my teachers, and everyone with whom I have ever had a thought-provoking dialogue: thank you. I am MacJab. I am a brother; I am a son. Mom, Dad, Janie - thank you, I love you all so much.

Most importantly, I am a friend. If this bio is a tribute to anyone, it is a tribute to you who have passed these eventful times with me. Brian, Mac, Smatthew, James (23 Skidoo!), Drew, Nathan, Wee William, Brett, Shaun, Sarah, Lora, Claire, Whitney, Marianna, Brenna, and Will - thank you for filling my evenings up with phone conversations and visits, my weekends with activity, and my life with purpose. I'll remember the music (Weezer; "stuck like chuck"; Breakdown! Feel my Knub!; Next Gen; Hibernating Monkeys; and, of course, the Flat Rate$), the movies (Ghost Ninja Danghaio 2; Ben Dover meets the spaghetti supper), the smashing, the disastrous school dances, the Gumby costume, the zany parties, summer before senior year (water balloon fight!), the rollercoaster of female relationships, two days of phone-talking at debate camp, playing in the William tree, and the overall goofiness of everything involved. It's been fun.

There are too many things to remember and list off, but the past six years have been a lot of different things. MBA has been quite an experience; some good and some not. I hope all the work's been worth it cause it's been a lot, but I think I've managed to have fun with it too: Judson, freshman year wouldn't've been the same without you, you were always cool with letting me come hang out with y'all and spring break that year was incredible; thanks for everything. Paul and Will, I hated not being able to go to school with you guys, but we still managed to find time to cause trouble. Been through more with the two of you than anyone, and Will, we always managed to nearly kill ourselves in my car. Track state champs soph. year: that was the best feeling in the world, and I hope to do it again this spring. Cyrus and Dave-I'm really not that stupid but watch those elbows anyway. Playin' pool with the BMP at Clayton's was fun, but brought back memories of my old house and the many nights there. There were so many times that I wasn't sure I'd make it or want to make it through my senior year at MBA but now that it has come I realize that it wouldn't've been possible without all my friends and all the times we spent simply trying to find something to do. There are so many times and so many experiences I want to remember, but most importantly I want to remember my friends and family that helped me make it through everything. Ash, the past two years seem to have flown by, but they have been incredible and having you with me has made all the difference. Mom and Dad, I couldn't've done it without your support: you were always there to cheer me on at my meets, whether in Chattanooga or at Overton at 10 at night in the rain. Thank you all, Mom, Dad, Judson, Baker, Pat, and Ash. I love you all.

John Murdock

Hey me, remember me?

At some hopefully distant point in time I'll probably look at this yearbook and ask myself "just what was I thinking?" Then I'll quickly rationalize that there is no way that I was ever possibly this uncool. When I first came to MBA, I found sanctuary in W15, where I discovered the story about the boy and his flower. The boy in this story, too eager to see a flower's beauty, plucked the petals from the flower before it blossomed and subsequently ruined the flower's beauty. The moral? Let the flower unfold. Over these four years I've sounded the battle cry "cheeeeeeeeeek" with Gluck, my fellow warrior; dodged the ominous and incessant demands for the "equipment crew" with Brent and Anthony (weren't the van rides great?); dissected Vergil's Aeneid with "Peepers" (I really dislike this nickname, but so does Paul); and contributed to the think tank of Anthony and JB as that mischievous but innocent classmate, Murboc, was born. Through all of this I, like Mr. Gaither's flower, have unfolded. Though tentative when I entered MBA, with the help and support of friends, family, and faculty, I've finally gotten the hang of this whole high-school thing, too bad I can't do it again. Daniel, not only have you provided me with some nice clothes, but you have provided a strong friendship and I wish you success in everything in which you aren't competing against me. Mom and Dad, I wouldn't have been able to come this far without you, thanks for the love and support. Carolyn, sorry but you can't come here. Teachers, coaches, and administrators, thank you for all of your time and effort, it has made a difference inside the classroom and out. Fellow students, be careful out there, remember the good years and make some more. Best of luck to you.

A POSTCARD FROM THE VOLCANO
-- Wallace Stevens, 1936

*Children picking up our bones
Will never know that these were once
As quick as foxes on the hill;*

*And that in autumn, when the grapes
Made sharp air sharper by their smell
These had a being, breathing frost;*

*And least will guess that with our bones
We left much more, left what still is
The look of things, left what we felt*

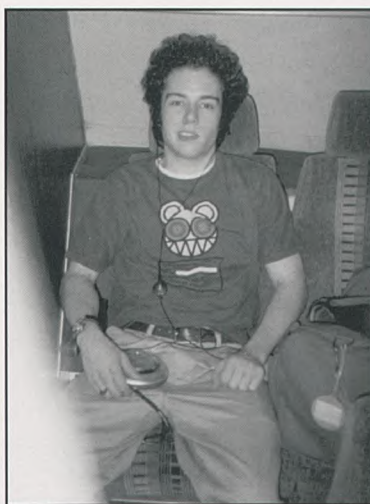

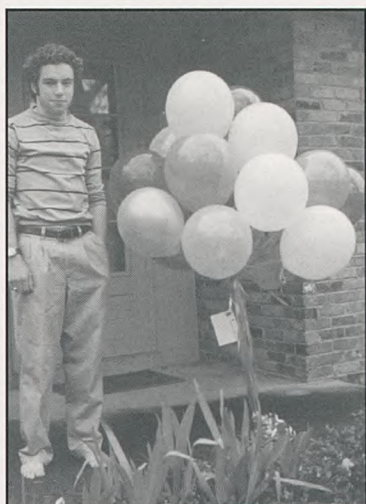

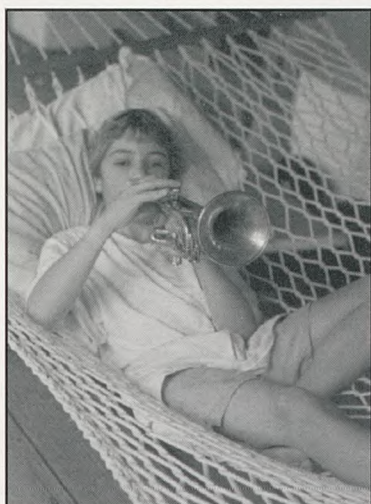

*At what we saw. The spring could blow
Above the shuttered mansion-house,
Beyond our gate and the windy sky*

*Cries out a literate despair.
We knew for long the mansion's look
And what we said of it became*

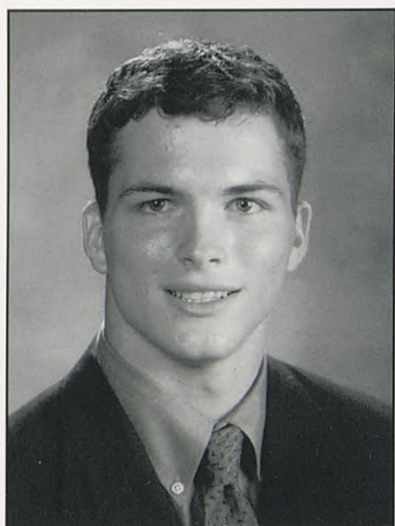

*A part of what it is . . . Children,
Still weaving budded aureoles,
Will speak our speech and never know,*

*Will say of the mansion that it seems
As if he that lived there left behind
A spirit storming in blank walls,*

*A dirty house in a gutted world,
A tatter of shadows peaked to white,
Smeared with the gold of the opulent sun.*

My world is a painted fresco, where coloured shapes
Of old, ineffectual lives linger blurred
and warm;
An endless tapestry the past has woven drapes
The halls of my life, compelling my soul to conform.

The surface of dreams is broken,
The picture of the past is shaken and scattered.
Fluent, active figures of men pass along the railway, and I am woken
From the dreams that the distance flattered....

Oh my boys, bending over your books,
In you is trembling and fusing
The creation of a new-patterned dream,
dream of a generation:
And I watch to see the Creator, the power that patterns the dream....

Oh the terrible ecstasy of the consciousness that I am life!
Oh the miracle of the whole, the widespread, labouring concentration Swelling mankind like one bud to bring forth the fruit of a dream, Oh the terror of lifting the innermost I
out of the sweep of the impulse of life,
And watching the great Thing labouring through the whole round flesh of the world;
And striving to catch a glimpse of the shape of the coming dream,
As it quickens within the labouring,
white-hot metal,
Catch the scent and the colour of the coming dream,
Then to fall back exhausted into the unconscious, molten life!

We will soon go out from this world into the next in it we will find love, freedom, and death. What we must remember is that life is transcendent and we are fading every day. I wish for my life to only have the regret of not more time to live the way I already have. Friends may come and go, but the individual remains the same. Honors mean nothing happiness means everything.

Bill Cameron and Sam Garner, you guys have been my best friends, I may have hated you at times, but I know you'll be there in a pinch. Paul Nealy, you know things about my social life that I wouldn't want to tell anyone else. Jump ship and never touch the water. you can do anything for 5 years. There have been adjustments, confusion, depression, success, and anticipation, but it's been an interesting ride. Hey Bill Paul let's go bowling. You know I really do believe I can make a career out of Art. Do you know the muffin man? Invader Zim, Gir, and Skool. I'm gonna get some whip cream and then I'm gonna whip his butt. Hey Bill, you gonna be okay? Prof. Bill and Prof. Garner. Hey Dave, let's go to Wendy's 6th period. Just remember to never give up, never give in, and question authority.

As I leave the campus, I will forget the sleep deprived theme nights and remember the wonderful times.

National Latin Exam- Maxima Cum Laude, Magna Cum Laude; Studio Art II Award; The Scholastic Art & Writing Awards 2000- Gold Key, & 3 Silver Keys; Time To Rise

As I look back at the four years that have passed,
I feel that I have reached my final destination at last.
Everything that I longed for is now within my grasp,
And I have learned to act quickly 'cause time moves fast.

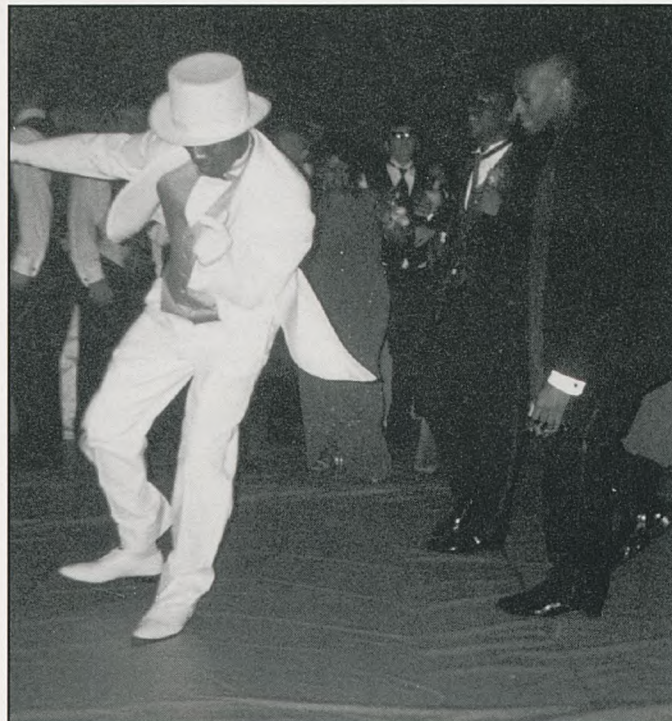

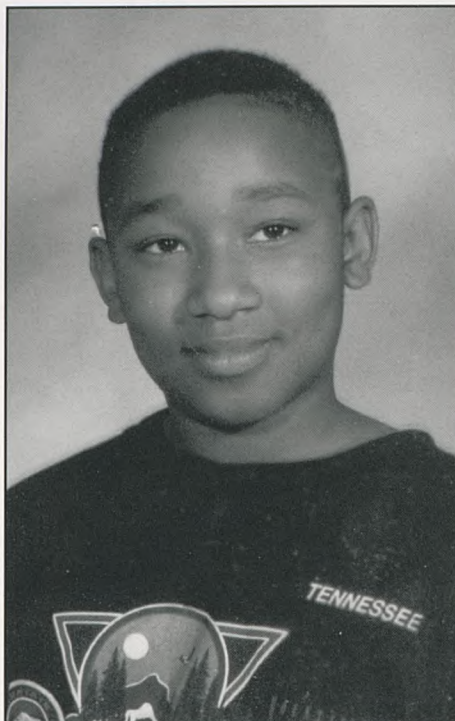

It's funny, I always wanted those school days to end,
Now I wish I could just relive them again.
Even though I am moving on I can't forget my friends.
And I must remember at the end of this journey a new one begins.

I look back at that shy quiet guy, and see his spiritual growth,
It's about time he learnt what matters to him the most.
Whether he was chillin' with his peep's or chewin' on some toast,
His mind was drifting with the waves of every coast.

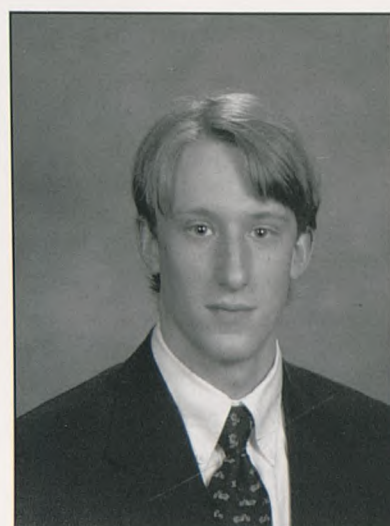

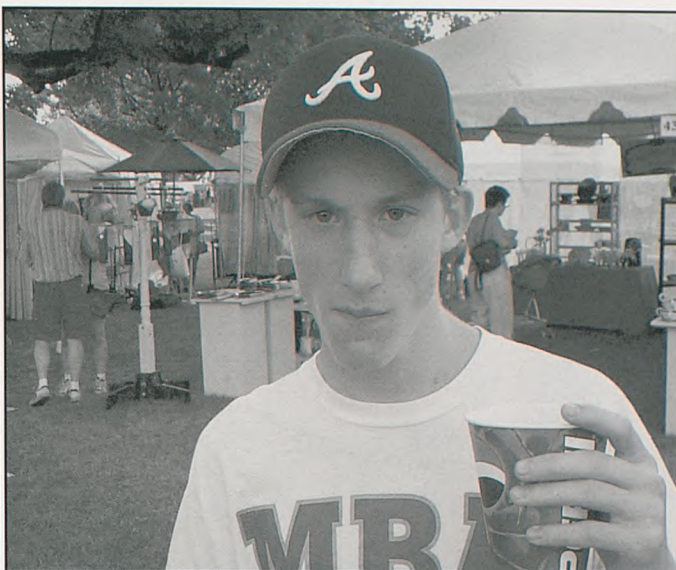

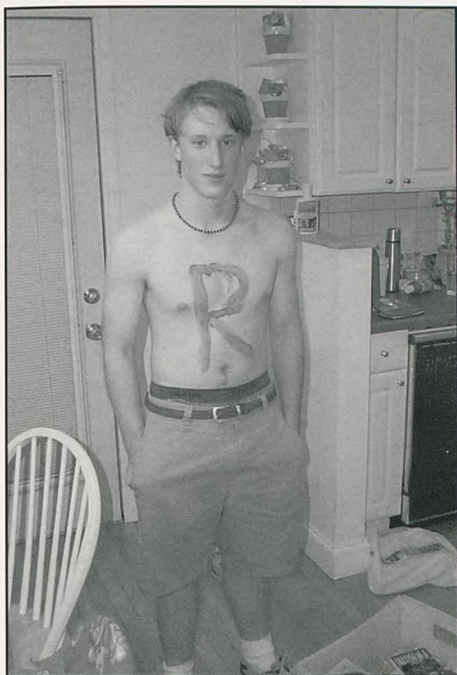

I remember the up all-night essays that so quickly fade away,
And how through the hard times my mom would say, "It'll be okay,"
And those simple words could change my whole day,
Besides, laughing with Mrs. Browne and Rosie chased all my troubles away.

Somewhere I started my growth from a boy to a man.
Yeah, I finally made that voyage from sea to solid land.
And I have to thank all the people who gave me a hand:
For if it wasn't for you, I'd still be a ninth grader with his feet in the sand.

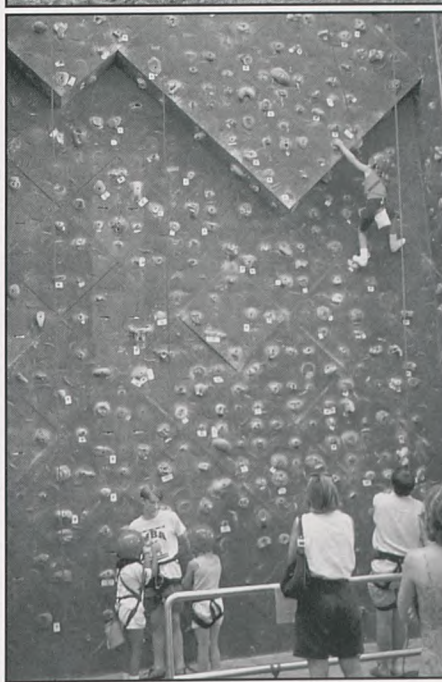

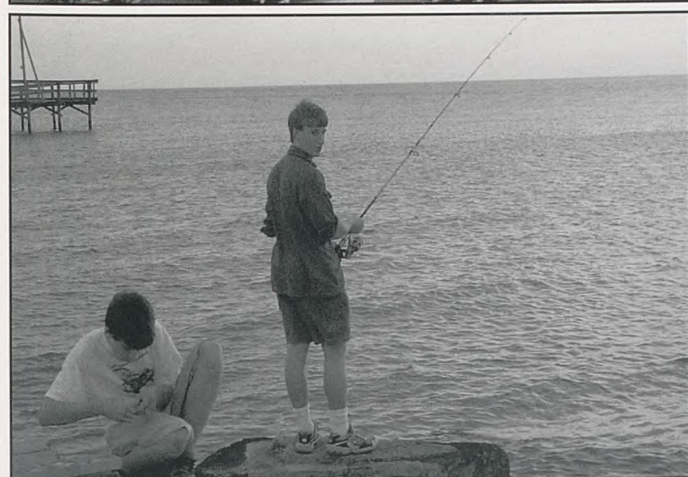

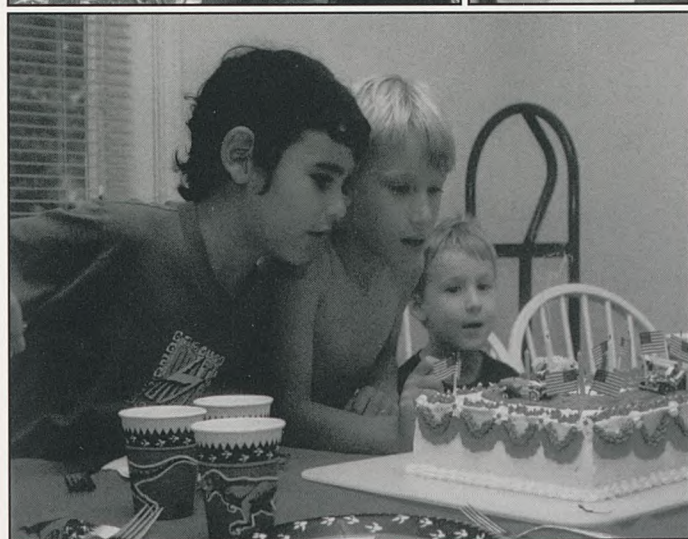

Thank you: God, Mama & 'nem; Mr. Carl Jones, Keisha, & 'nem; Mr. Bailey, Mr. Bodeinheimer, Dr. Clair, and the 100 Black Men; and to all of my teachers in and out of the classroom, especially Rosie, Mrs. Browne, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Gaither, Mrs. Solomon, Mrs. Patrick, & Mrs. Hensley; can't forget all my friends: Paul, Reggie, Trey, E, & the rest of the crew; Brent, Peyton, etc. And to all the people that I can't mention due to the word limit, luv' ya'.

Thank you and goodbye. To my friends for being unique and positive. It will be different now without that unifying backdrop of friendly oppression (kidding, but only slightly), but I hope we'll all remember what good came of the few short years that will seem like a different lifetime as we get older. Seriously—thanks.

To my teachers who, for the most part, really cared about both the subject and our education. I hope I am good enough to myself not to forget what I've learned from you.

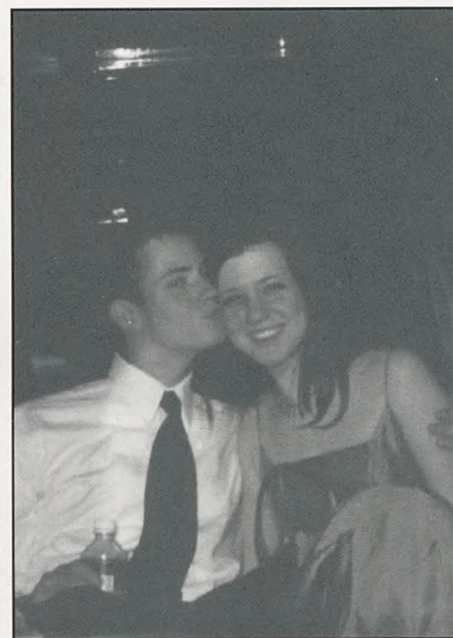

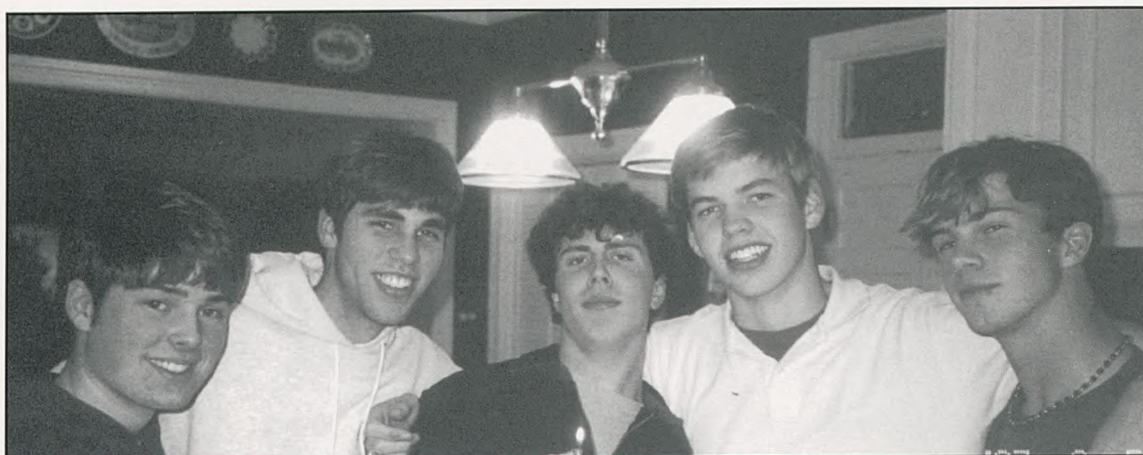

To the teachers who insist on unflinching order: I appreciate your commitment to enforcing an honorable but at times unnecessary code.

To my family: There is way too much here to assign adjectives to what I've learned through all of you. Mom, Dad—thank you for having a sincere approach, the best intentions, and the most interesting ways of communicating them.

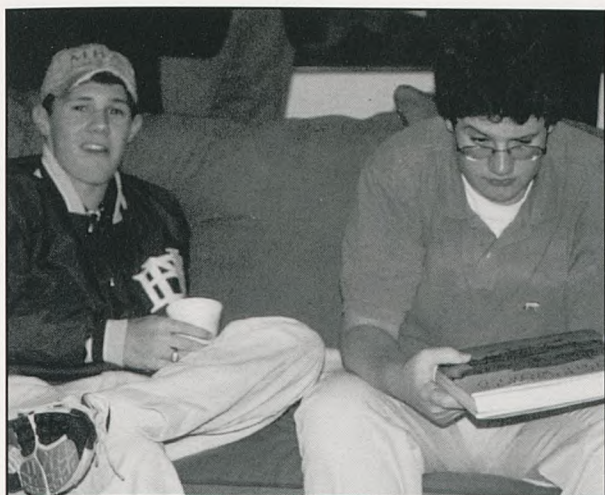

To everyone who has been a part of my life up until this point: I hope you stay part of it.

To tell the truth, I am very hesitant to jump in and chase the future. It's comforting knowing that we are all in the same boat, in many ways, and that on at least some level we can all relate to one another, and that the time spent here will not be forgotten.

Thank you everything. I'll miss these days. Long live Prussia.

Bradford Gioia

Headmaster

Thanks to Mr. Gioia's leadership, MBA's students and teachers had a remarkable 2002-2003 school year. The seniors grew into a unified class that achieved remarkable academic success and served our community well. Mr. Gioia also worked to continue developing our exchange programs that provide students and faculty one of the most extensive opportunities abroad among high schools in our country. Mr. Gioia has also overseen the faculty's new ventures into interdisciplinary studies, urging teachers to work together to broaden their interests and knowledge. Further, Mr. Gioia has taken special interests in the arts and music programs, and like the rest of us, enjoyed the growth in our jazz band and chorus, along with the level of expertise of many individual artists, actors, and musicians. Proud of all our programs from the classroom to the athletic fields, from the stage to the gallery, Mr. Gioia strives to build the balance and perspective that MBA offers to the students and faculty.

Director of the High School

Popular in whatever position he has served, Mr. Tillman has been a full-time teacher, a coach, the Athletic Director, and now Director of the High School. This year as in year's past, Mr. Tillman is the go-to man when something has to get done. From registration to many other events that require his leadership, Mr. Tillman is ready and willing to wear whatever hat necessary, to take on any responsibility. He is a genuine model for leadership, demonstrating that leading starts with example, that a good leader asks more of himself than he does of others. Some programs Mr. Tillman has pioneered are the SAD Guys, the Carnival, the Talent Show, the Summer Leadership Program, and the Athletic Game Programs. No matter where you see Mr. Tillman on campus, his energy and his winning smile are contagious, urging us all to come together to make MBA a great school.

" 'I think MBA, especially, is playing well right now,' McCallie Coach Ralph Potter said. 'But if Brentwood Academy performs like they did [last Friday], I'm not sure anybody can beat them.' "We concur. Our pick: Brentwood Academy, 24-10." - The Tennessean, November 21

Nobody ever gave this team a chance. Coming into this season, the MBA community did not have the highest expectations for their football team. How could they? It seemed that all of the offensive line had gone off to Princeton. There were rumors that Joe Davis might have to start at right tackle. On top of that, the coach that had won three straight Clinic Bowl Championships took off for the new Ensworth High School. I guess he figured last year would be a good time to get out. After all, MBA was supposed to be a notch below wretched this season. Everyone was trying to tell this team how it was "supposed" to lose this year. I guess this team never got the message.

Prior to the postseason, many concerns and questions existed for this team. There was the loss to BGA. The poundings received from BA and Baylor. One has to remember that with two weeks left in the regular season, the playoffs, much less the Clinic Bowl, were still an uncertainty for the Big Red. But this roller coaster of a regular season gave the team the character and strength it needed in order to keep on surviving until finally that gold trophy was in their hands.

The spirit this year has been higher than ever. I think there have been 7 school spirit days this year, more than ever before. Prior to this game, the school had a pep rally, the alumni had tailgate at Vandy, and the seniors had their own cookout. Then everyone went into the stadium and cheered until they had sore throats. Students who had never held an interest in football were on their feet screaming their hearts out for the Big Red.

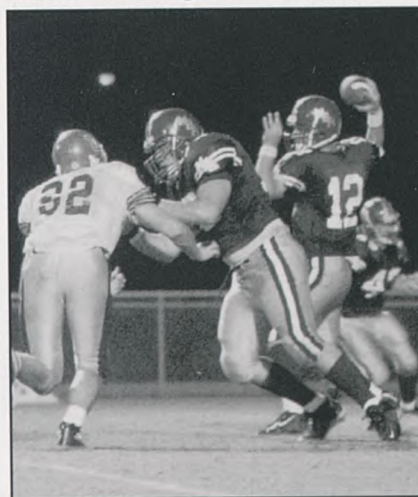

When I asked Mr. Gioia what a Clinic Bowl win would do for the school, he said, "I think if we win, this will confirm that we are indeed in another one of the great eras for this school. A return to what our traditions have always been about." In other words, let the Rutledge Era begin. The coaching job that was done this year was phenomenal. In the playoffs, all three teams we beat had beaten us before. The reason for this turnaround has got to begin with the coaches. They are who inspired and drove this team to victory. They are who put long hours in watching tape and scouting teams to see what changes needed to be made for the next game. It's time for a new era to begin.

What does this year's Clinic Bowl trophy symbolize? The blood, sweat, and tears that every football player puts in from June to November. The two-a-days. Spring practice. Hours of watching film. Hours of practice in the cold. The sacrifice that has to be made playing football is greater than other at this school. That is why the fans show up. That is why they cheer. This trophy needs to be placed on a different shelf than all the others.

How did MBA turn this season around? Robert Foster, one of the hardest workers on the Big Red team, said, "For me this season was journey with ups and downs. What really changed us from the epitome of mediocrity, at 4-4, to a champion was a definitive move to being a team with heart. Once we started playing as a team, we played together like champions." And champions they are. --John Eason

The 2002 cross-country team started the season with high expectations having undergone long hours of summer training including four days at the Saint Mary's Retreat in the team's annual cross-country camp. The Big Red kicked off the season with a bang dominating the Drake Invitational with Nathan Mulherin winning individual honors. The coaches pushed the team hard focusing on more speed workouts while maintaining high mileage after a disappointing fifth place finish at last year's state meet. The team trained with classic runs including the Commodore, Stinker 4 +, FOP, and DeYoung's Magical Mystery Tour. The intense training paid off with strong finishes at big meets such as the Tennessee Classic, A. F. Bridges, and the Lexington Catholic Invitational. The Big Red added to its training session visualizations in the Star Chambers of Ingram followed by a silent run. Not talking during the thirty-minute run was the biggest challenge that Brock Baker, the most improved runner of the year, had to face. As the runners reached their mental and physical peak, the Big Red reclaimed the Metro championship from FRA and retained the region Championship with Nathan Mulherin leading the team. Additionally, the JV team finished another strong season winning the JV Metro and Region championships with "Barkley Simmons" leading the pack. When the November 2nd state meet came around, a varsity team consisting of seniors Nathan Mulherin, Robert Stewart, David Scoville, and Clayton Trammell and sophomores Brock Baker, Will Smith, and James Hollis was ready. The Big Red ran a strong race with all seven varsity runners running personal bests to score the best net time in MBA history. Nathan Mulherin, Robert Stewart, and Brock Baker led the team winning All-State honors. Unfortunately despite the team's strong efforts, the team finished fourth overall. The cross-country team would like to thank the Big Red Army for coming to the Metro and State meets. It marked the most cross-country fan support in MBA history. The senior leaders Nathan Mulherin, Robert Stewart, Clayton Trammell, David Scoville, Jim Bryant, Hamilton Berry, David Boyd, Matt Rowenczak, and Alec Berryman would like to wish the 2003 team good luck and thank the coaches for all of their help.

VARSITY GOLF

I guess we might call last year a rebuilding year for MBA golf. We won only twice and had numerous "off the course" problems for many of the players. This year could be compared to a roller-coaster. To begin the year, as usual, Coach Caldwell gave us the "Guys, you have no chance of winning" speech. But as MBA golfers stumbled onto McCabe golf course one hot August morning, it was obvious that this year was going to be a revival. Two days and 18 holes later, only ten golfers were left to make up this year's Big Red golf squad. Five golfers are returning lettermen: Stephen "Are you sure that was a six?" Dahl, Webb "Tin Cup" White, Cheeks Eason, Matt Morgan, and Mac Keith. The new arrivals this year include Jeff "Whos 2pac?" Newman, Trey "Trash-talkin" Kendall, Lee "Walrus" White, Jeremy "Eliot" Pinsly, and Toby Simpson. Unlike in years past, this year's golf team was very young but still experienced. The Big Red headed out to play its first match at Henry Horton State Park against Father Ryan and Marshall County. Although the team lost to both Ryan and Marshall County, there were already great signs of improvement. Last year's team score of 351 was shattered as the team shot 315 which included a 77 by Webb White. In the next big tournament, the Bruin Invitational, the Big Red battled it out against twenty of the best teams in the area at the Country Club of Franklin. The team managed an 11th place finish (a little better than last year's last place). The total score of 319, although somewhat disappointing, was 42 strokes better than last year's score. Mac Keith led the way for the Big Red as he fired a 71 and came in second place overall in the Invitational. Webb White (81), John Eason (82), and Jeff Newman (84) rounded out the top four scores for the squad.

The Big Red was playing so well at one point in the middle of the year that its record was 7-5-2, having just come off a huge win over Brentwood Academy, the powerhouse of the region. Everyone around campus was wondering if the golf team was finally back. There were whispers of winning region and making a run for state. Even a pep rally ...wait, sorry, dreaming there for a second. One large impediment to our path to success was overlooked. USN. Yeah, sadly the team lost to USN in golf (or for that matter anything) for the first time ever. Then BGA thrashed us at Belle Meade and suddenly we had a losing record going into region. We desperately needed some type of divine intervention, some inspiration, a voice from the heavens. We looked to Coach Michael Hugh Caldwell for these words:

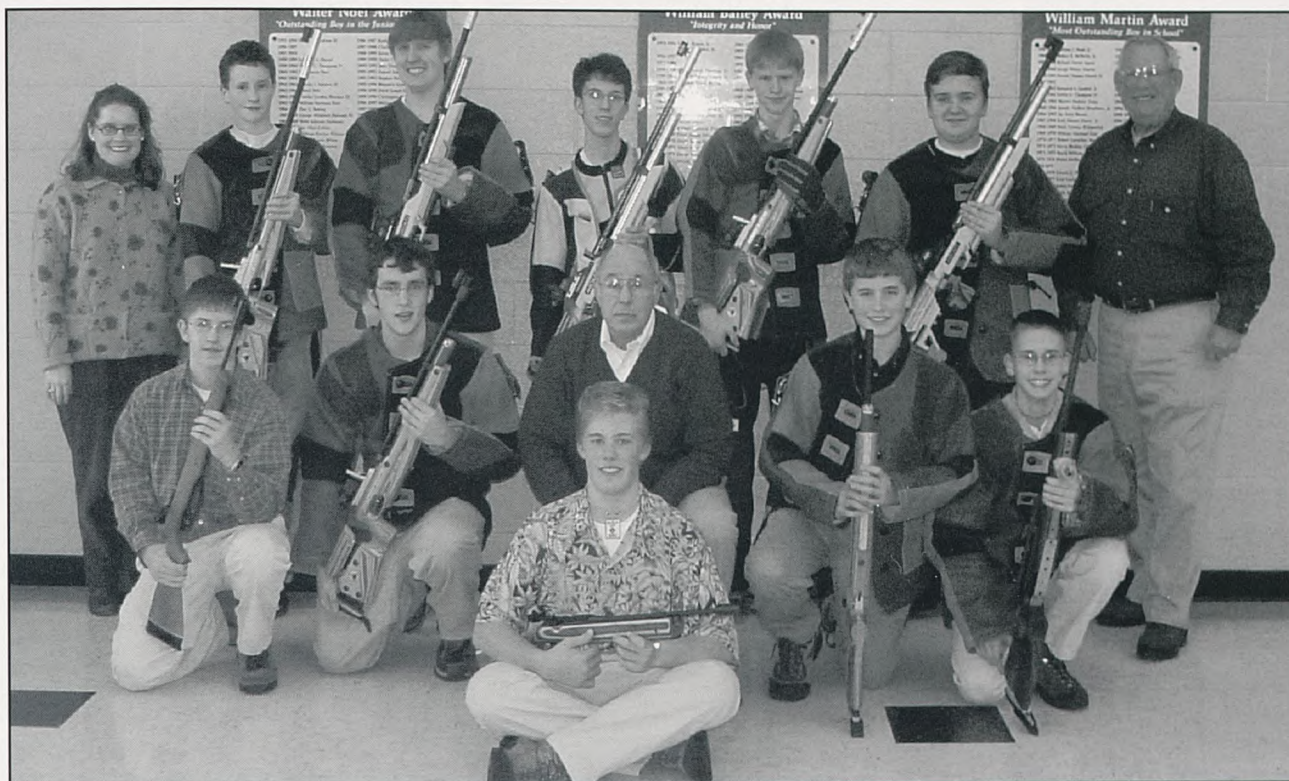

"Guys, the great thing about high school golf is that the regular season doesn't even matter. It's practice. The real season begins now with region. If we don't stick by our guns and follow the rules, we'll be up a creek without a paddle."

Vince Lombardi couldn't have said it better himself. Taking his words to heart, the golf team found a way to get into the top three at region, insuring a spot in state. As the Big Red headed down Natchez Trace towards Pickwick Landing, site of the State Tournament, there was only thing on our minds: When is coach going to realize he still has his blinker on?

After day one, things were not looking good for the Big Red. The low score was Mac Keith's 81, followed by John Eason's 82 (which included a smooth 46 on the front side), Trey Kendall's 84, and Webb White's 86. Things only got worse. I won't name names. Webb White. Yeah, Mr. White decided to drop down another high score in the 80s, but this time he added a twist. He signed an incorrect scorecard. In other words, he was DQed. Sadly, the Big Red finished last in the state, but there is still a silver lining. There are only two seniors on the team and two freshmen now have state tournament experience. With 8 returning lettermen, look for the Big Red golf team to make a run for state next year and the years to come. For this year's seniors, there is also a silver lining. Father Ryan finished 4th in the region. Must have been practicing with Mr. Kelly.

VARSITY RIFLERY

Middle Row: Scott Rowenczak, Ben Norton, Leo Lujan (HC), Pete Burgess, Erik Swanson

Twice a year, the MBA Rifle Team travels north into Kentucky to compete against Shelbyville High School - a team that many consider the best scholastic rifle team in the nation over the last two years. They are the "gold standard" against which we rate our performance.

In September, we opened our season against Shelbyville and got clobbered 2179 to 2310 out of 2400 possible - they were ready and we were just coming out of summer hibernation. We met them again in March and fired a team score of 2291 which was the highest score an MBA team had ever fired in position air rifle competition. We still lost but we narrowed the spread to 36 points. All of our top shooters are returning next fall and they won't be hibernating over the summer.

The 2002/2003 rifle team may be the best group of shooting athletes in recent MBA history. They placed second overall in the Gary Anderson Invitational at Fort Benning, Georgia in November and handily won the Tennessee State High School Air Rifle Championship in April for the seventh year running. With the state title came an invitation to compete in a national championship during June at Wilmington, NC.

In February, David Amiot earned an invitation to the National Junior Olympic Air Rifle Championship held at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs where he placed 27th in the nation. David will be competing this summer in the U.S. International Rifle Championship to gain experience at the highest level of rifle competition.

The highlight of the year was our annual spring-break trip to Fort Benning to train on the Army Marksmanship Unit ranges under the direction of Bill Krilling, a former World Champion and Olympic Coach. Joining us this year for the first time was Dr. Lance Miller, a nationally recognized expert on sports mental training. Dr. Miller conducted daily seminars in the morning and we trained at the AMU in the afternoon with Mr. Krilling.

At the start of the year, Juniors David Amiot, Jesse Richards and Eric Hill formed the core of our top four member precision rifle team joined by Freshman Andrew Davis. Sophomore Ben Norton started the year shooting sporter air rifle (a lighter weight entry level air rifle) and then qualified to move up to the Olympic grade precision air rifle. Ben demonstrated consistent improvement over the year and raised his personal best in competition by almost 100 points. In the final match of the year, Ben stepped in as a fourth member of our state championship team.

The final event of the year was the State High School Rifle Awards Banquet where David Amiot, Jesse Richards and Andrew Davis were honored as members of the Tennessee High School All-State Rifle Team.

We bid farewell to Mrs. Ivy Ashworth who has ably served the team as an Assistant Coach during the fall each of the past three years. She will be missed!

The MBA Varsity Basketball team finished the 2002-2003 regular season in a tie for the third place in the Division II Middle Region. The season was a test of character for the Big Red. There were few proud moments during a 5-22 season for many players who had experienced a State Final Four run just the year before. Yet, seniors Jeffrey Hollis and Paul Robinson led a group of young players that displayed a remarkable amount of poise throughout the season. There were so many moments when this team could have given up, but large deficits and difficult odds never took the fight out of these players. USN packed its gym with fans and students in anticipation of knocking off the Big Red, but Jeffrey Hollis scored 27 points to lead the Big Red to victory. After an 8-0 start, BGA was shocked at home by the Big Red in a defensive battle that MBA won 36-35. Jeffrey Hollis and Paul Robinson scored 19 and 13 points respectively as MBA defeated USN one last time in the Middle Region Tournament. Senior Jeffrey Hollis and Junior Brad French led the team in scoring and were named to the All-Region Team. Jeffrey Hollis ('03) and Paul Robinson ('03) were the only seniors on a young team that will return most of its players for the 2003-2004 season.

Although the recurring goal of winning a state championship was not met this year, the season can be described as nothing less than a success. This year's regular season highlights consisted of a 35-31 victory over Clarksville High School and a nail-biting 33-28 victory over Father Ryan High School. The overall record for the regular season dual meets was 18-0. The team placed third at the Harrison Duals in Ohio, second at the Rossvie Duals in Clarksville, seventh at the McCallie Invitational, second at the Father Ryan Invitational, and second at the Division II Middle TN Regional Duals. The 2002-2003 Varsity Wrestling Team finished third in the State Duals Tournament and third in the State

Individual Tournament. There were also several individual state placers on this year's team. Matt Francis (Jr.), James Dade (Jr.), Frank Heron (Sr.), and Alex Hall (Sr.) all placed fourth. William Simpson (Jr.) and Taylor Tate (Jr.) both placed third. Blake Luttrell (Sr.) and Blake Goodman (Sr.) were both state runner-ups losing in double overtime, and Ian Thornhill (Sr.) and Seth Cooper (Sr.) were both state champions. William Simpson, Blake Luttrell, and Ian Thornhill were also chosen for the 2003 All Mid-State Dream Team. For a great year and wrestling program, the team thanks all the wrestling coaches, Coaches Simpson, Jenkins, McBride, Sowell, and Spiegl.

The 2002-2003 Big Red Swim Team surpassed all expectations as an era came to end. The old regime of MBA swimmers going on to achieve collegiate swimming success began with the "Four Horseman of the Apocalypse" and ended this year with the lone senior, James Williams. However, the future is bright for the MBA Aquanauts. With the dual threat of rising juniors, Paul Crook and Van "The Man" Diehl, coupled with the emergence of rising freshman Tom Wiseman, the Big Red will still be a force to be reckoned with in the future. And do not forget our divers! MBA's Spence Cummings and John Lee will be returning to crush all Region opponents once again. Next year will be led by yet another Vutsinas, this one named Steve. At the beginning of the year there was doubt about the abilities of this year's squad. As Coach Carter commented, "I would have to say that the boys surpassed expectations this year. They dug in and made every swim and dive count." Senior and Captain James Williams led the way all year as he never lost a race in the dual meet during his last campaign. Williams also led the Big Red to its first dual meet victory over Father Ryan since his freshman campaign. At this year's region meet Diehl and Crook placed in the top eight, scoring valuable points in several events. Williams, even though he was ill, finished fourth in the 100 Fly and was the Region Champ in the 100 breast. David Reynolds also achieved his state cut in the 50 free at this meet. All year the relay of Williams, Crook, Diehl, and Wiseman had great success in both the 200 Medley and 400 Free relays, and that success continued at State and Region. The highlights of the year came at State. Cummings and Lee both placed in the top sixteen in diving, and Diehl and Crook scored invaluable points by having several top sixteen swims. Williams had a great meet. He finished third in both the 100 breast and the 100 fly while at the same time earning All-State and All-American recognition. In addition to that, James rewrote the MBA record books in the 100 fly by crushing the previous record held by Sam Kuykendall. The third place finish at Region and the incredible third-place finish at state were great accomplishments for this underrated squad.

The 2002-2003 Bowling team set a season record for victories with seventeen and again qualified for the State Tournament by finishing second in the Middle Region of Division II. The team bowled well but was knocked out of the State Tournament in the Quarterfinal round by Christian Brothers, who eventually went on to win state.

Standout performances came from veterans David Bilhartz ('05) who had the high game of the season at 234, and David Eskind ('04) with the high series of 577. Seniors Josh Cherry, Brian Christie, Trip Tate, and Michael McDaniel led the team to a 17-7 record.

The 2003 MBA baseball team had hopes of building upon their third-place finish in the state tournament in 2002. After a quality win over Centennial, the team had a major let-down in an ugly defeat to McGavock during the first week of the season. While the rest of the student body was working on the their tans, the baseball team traveled to sunny Orlando, Florida, in hopes of finally playing the great ball that they knew they could. After losing to Florida powerhouses St. Cloud, and Cypress, the Big Red rebounded and managed to leave the Sunshine State with two wins and two losses. After Orlando, the team traveled to Memphis to play in the very competitive USA Classic, where they would meet perennial powerhouse Germantown in the first round. After an offensive explosion in the first two innings, building a lead of 10-0, the Big Red failed to put a complete game together and fell to the Giants 11-10 in the last out of the game, knocking the wind out of the team. After yet another loss to Oakland, the team once again rebounded and defeated Covington and ECS, and left the tournament on top of their game.

After Memphis came the most important few weeks of the season during region play. Following a rather embarrassing loss to region foe BGA 13-3, the Big Red dropped the following outing to BA in a 10-8 slugfest. Starting region play with a miserable 0-2 record, the Big Red finally started to come together and play some good ball, with two consecutive wins over BGA, a satisfying victory over top-seed BA, and a very enjoyable sweep of rival Father Ryan, returning the favor of what the Irish did to us last year. This stretch of clutch wins earned the team a #2 seed in the region tournament and paired them once again with Father Ryan. The Big Red pitching staff, however, failed to calm the Irish bats, leading to defeat, and a spot in the undesirable elimination game against BGA: the winner goes to state; the loser goes home. Behind a great pitching performance by senior Hunter Hawkins, the Big Red bats just couldn't find the holes in the defense, disappointingly dropping the contest 2-0 to the Wildcats.

Although the season ended on a disappointing note of failing to make it to the state tournament as expected, the team found great comfort in being the first team to win 20 games in recent years, compiling a final record of 21-14. Another highlight of the roller-coaster season was Wesley Langois' league-high nine homeruns, which earned him title of co-MVP of the middle region. In addition to Wesley's honor, Brad French, Scott Pettus, and Tom Santi were named to the All-Region team. Although the team will greatly miss the leadership of this year's seven seniors, Hunter Hawkins, Michael McDaniel, Trip Tate, Brent Sayles, John Murdock, Anthony Bills, and Wesley "Hambone" Langois, the Big Red baseball program has a very bright future for next year, with six returning starters, and an experienced junior class taking the lead.

The Montgomery Bell Academy track team began a tremendous season early in February. As the cold rain of late winter fell, the track team saw its own breath before it in light of a promising season. The long jogs down to Bowling and to Elington Park to do sprints and plyos (form running) were a struggle in the beginning, but by the end of the season the road was more a comfort and ease compared to the harder workouts. With the demise of the Denbo dynasty in shot put, young Matt Bubis found a strong resolve to work "so hard" for his team. Cannon Kinnard and Jeff Snyder dominated the pole vault, becoming an intense one-two punch for most of the year. Other important field event athletes were Jay Pilkerton in the discus as well as Charlie Morgan in the triple-jump. All of these were state placers. Confronted by youth and inexperience within the sprinters, the Big Red pulled together a couple of strong relay teams and a few strong individuals. The distance crew was led by the seasoned veterans Nathan Mulherin, Clayton Trammell, Robert Stewart, and David Scoville.

The highlight of the MBA track season was an early strong victory at the Shoney's City Championship. The team cruised to an early lead and never looked back. Cannon led the celebration with his victory dance and a victory lap. The early indicators proved that MBA had quite the team. The 4 x 800 relay team and the 4 x 400 relay team were very strong and powerful. In the open 400 Drew Carney, Robert Foster, and Wilson Robinson were extremely talented. A strong showing in the open 200 by Alex Shofner could not be overlooked. The open 800 was a landslide, as MBA went 1-2-3. Jeff Snyder, Nathan Mulherin, and Robert Stewart literally dominated the entire field. Shoney's was an incredible meet with an unbelievable victory.

On to Region went the MBA track team. There the team posted three of the best times in the state in the 4 x 400, 4 x 800, and open 400. Region was a hardfought battle in which the Big Red fell short, but still qualified people in 14 of 18 events for state. Andy Snyder and Jay Pilkerton qualified for the Decathlon. Andy also qualified in the 300 hurdles as the region champion, as a freshman! MBA qualified three people in the open 400, two people in the open 800, two people in the open mile, Nathan Mulherin in the two mile, and two people in the 300 IM hurdles. Jeff Snyder set a new meet record in the open 800 posting a time of 1 minute 56 seconds. After a strong second-place finish, MBA was poised for state.

After a long day in Memphis, MBA stood a solid fourth. The team had competed well but found itself lacking the strength needed to capture a state title. Everyone gave his best effort, though. A special nod should be given to the 4 x 800 team, three-time defending champions, as Jeff Snyder pushed past the leader on the final straightaway to seal the victory. The rest of the team fought just as hard and found a way to do the very best that they could.

The MBA track team could not have had the season it did without the coaching of Coach Pruitt, Coach Sadler, Coach Russell, Coach Russ, Coach DeYoung, and Coach Compton. Their dedication and commitment made the season worthwhile for all. The entire track team is in their debt for their service and time. The track team should be strong next year with leadership from Jeff Snyder, Charlie Morgan, Brock Baker, Chandler Tygard, and Lewis Dawson. And with rising talent such as Andy Snyder, Drew Carney, and Chambliss Shillinglaw, the team has a bright and talented future.

The MBA lacrosse team was 18-1 for the 2003 season. The year was dramatic and exciting, with wins over state champions in Kentucky, Texas, Georgia, and Florida. Ranked #1 in the Southern region and 47th nationally, the Big Red was certainly heavily favored to win the Tennessee state championship. Having gone undefeated in the regular season with a crushing win over MUS (the Big Red lax arch rival), the lax team's spirit was high going into the playoffs.

Being seeded first in the state tournament gave MBA a bye in the first round of the playoffs. Friday night, May 16, MBA played Christian Brothers in the semifinals. Despite a slow start, the lax team came out strong in the second half of the game to win handily. Later that Friday night, MUS played Chattanooga's McCallie in a close match that resulted in a 7 to 5 victory by MUS. The following day MBA and MUS were set to face off at two o'clock in the afternoon.

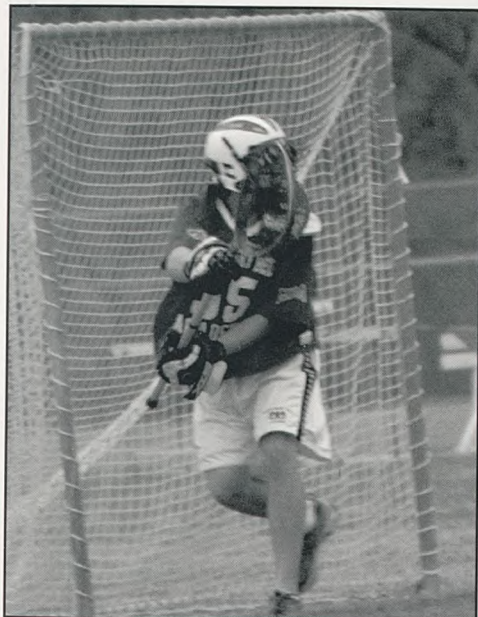

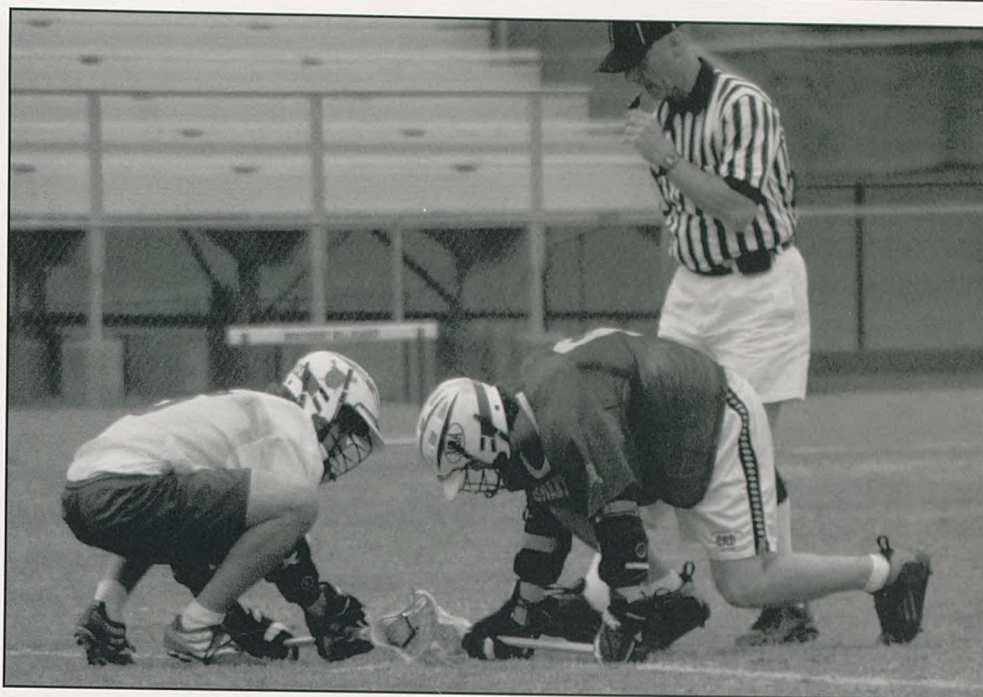

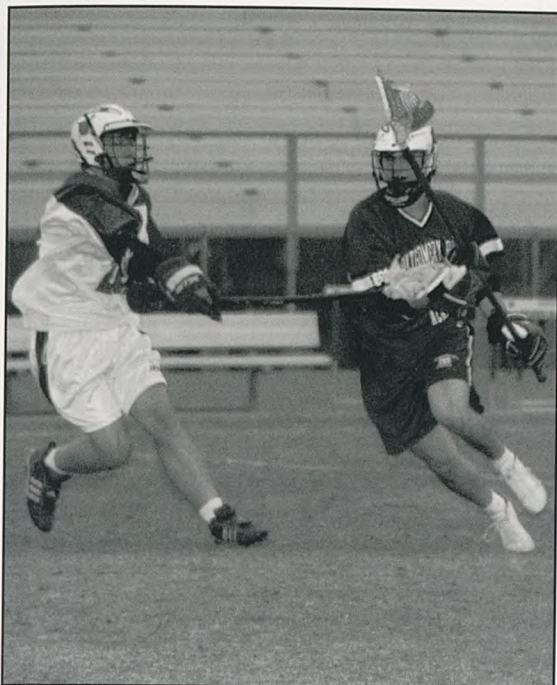

MUS had been crushed by MBA earlier in the year and came out pumped and ready to play. The game remained close throughout, but MBA never found its rhythm. In a devastating defeat, MBA for the third year in a row had to walk off the field with their heads down on State Championship Saturday.

Nevertheless, the lacrosse team finished the year with MBA's best record ever and is the school's first undefeated regular season lax team. They earned respect nationally for Southern lacrosse. Coach Cooper, after only his first year, won the "Coach of the Year" award. Attackman Cyrus Adams was named All-American. Attackman David Boyd was the Academic All American. David Fleming and Andrew Quinn were first team midfielders, and sophomore Clay Caroland was named to the second team. David Regan was the first team goalie, and defender Bennett Graham was first team as well. Junior Scott Hagan and Senior Jack Lewis received honorable mentions at defense. The season was a success.

Although the seniors leave the school having never won the state, they have a great deal to be proud of, and are one of the main reasons why the sport is growing so fast at MBA and in Nashville.

After the disappointing conclusion to the soccer season, it is safe to blame Memphis, not only for its superior soccer teams, but also for its biased seeding process. This year's team finished with an 11-6-3 record, with no loss by more than one goal, until the last game.

It would be expected that region runner-up MBA would have an easier draw in a state tournament consisting of eight teams. In an effort, however, to make it "more fair" for the Western region, which was allowed to send only two teams to the tournament (as opposed to the Middle and Western region's three), their draw was made slightly easier in order to have Western representation. Meanwhile, the number one team from Middle Tennessee (BGA) would have to play nationally-ranked MUS and the number two team (MBA) would have to play Christian Brothers (ranked 14th in the nation). Therefore, the desired seeding for MBA would have ironically been 3rd.

All complaining aside (or most of the complaining aside), the team had a successful season. Though we lost in the first round to Christian Brothers, the season was highlighted with wins over the top two teams from Alabama, Knoxville Catholic, Centennial, BGA, and Father Ryan. Individual skill was also prominent: Matt Serck, sweeper, was awarded defensive MVP, Michael Koban and Jeff Glaser were leading scorers, and Justin Holland had six shut-outs. Superior coaching from Mr. John Lanier, Mr. Richard Klausner, and Mr. Paul Wieck provided the strategy to defeat the many strong teams mentioned above. As Coach Lanier said, "The players played very hard and smart, but it wasn't quite enough. Matt Serck had another tremendous offensive game. Josh Cherry was effective in midfield to set up Michael Koban for a couple of attempts. Daniel Gluck also helped in the striker position for Koban. Justin Holland has been tremendous in goal all season."

Even though the tennis season is almost three months long, the success of the season is based on the team's performance at a one-day event---the state tournament. For the past few years, the MBA tennis team has had strong regular seasons, winning tournaments aplenty. However, the seasons will be remembered as an overall failure because the team lost to MUS in the finals of State the past two years. This season was different, as the tennis team refused to settle for another State runner-up trophy. Despite having mediocre results during the regular season this year, finishing second at both the Chattanooga Rotary and our own Carter Invitational, the team always kept its ultimate goal of winning State in mind and worked hard to achieve it. After suffering the only loss in a dual match all season, an 8-1 whipping by McCallie, Coach McGugin said, "I think this is a good thing, it's a wake up call...we'll look back on this after winning State and laugh about it." And he was right.

At State, the team drew Baylor in the semis for the 3rd year in a row. MBA won 4-0, with wins by #1 Chad Fernandez, #2 Mark Fritz, #3 Ted Tywang, and #4 Dwight Dale. The match was all Big Red as the numbers 2, 3, and 4 players lost a total of 9 games in six sets. Chad Fernandez ground out a tough match with Baylor's #1 player, Dylan Meezy, a player to whom Chad had lost twice during the regular season, eventually winning 6-3 in the third set. Although beating Baylor is always sweet, the Big Red knew we could not celebrate the victory too long, for the previous year we lost to MUS in the finals, after beating Baylor 4-0 in the semis.

In the afternoon finals, it was, once again an MBA-MUS matchup. Everything seemed to favor MUS, as they had handled a strong McCallie team 4-1 in the morning and had a home-court advantage. After singles it was 3-2 in favor of MUS. Chad Fernandez lost 6-3 in the third set to their strong #1 player in a great match. Mark Fritz lost 7-6, 6-4. Ted Tywang won at #3, 6-2, 7-6. Dwight Dale lost 6-1, 6-3, and at #5 Matthew Naftilan won 6-0, 6-4. For MBA to break the MUS 5-year streak of winning State, we would have to win both doubles matches. To insure a victory, MUS stacked the doubles lineup, putting their #1 team at #2 against a "weaker" team. MBA #2 doubles rose to the challenge, as Dwight Dale and Mark Fritz lost the first game of the match and never looked back, winning 8-1. The match was leveled at 3-3, and it came down to #1 doubles. Chad Fernandez and Ted Tywang pulled through, winning 8-4 and clinching MBA's first State team title since 1995, when Coach Dan McGugin and brother Bill were juniors.

As Coach McGugin says, "Give the credit to our two seniors, Mark Fritz and Chad Fernandez. We split our number one doubles team and our number two doubles team, and they both had seniors on them. And the finals came down to doubles --- it was a great way for both of these seniors to have the responsibility of winning the state championship."

For everyone on the team the win was a dream come true. It seemed as if even we had not believed we could win State. The celebration lasted for over half an hour and culminated with dunking a cooler on Coach McGugin.

The team wishes to thank first and foremost Coach McGugin, who always believed in us and pushed us towards our goal. (Thanks for making us practice doubles even though we hated it --- it sure paid off.) He is leaving next year to pursue football coaching at the University of Miami, and we wish him well although we will miss him greatly. Also, great thanks to Assistant Coaches Bailey and Sutton. The future looks bright for MBA tennis next year, with Coach Sutton taking over the reins. A special thanks to assistant coach Blake McMeans.

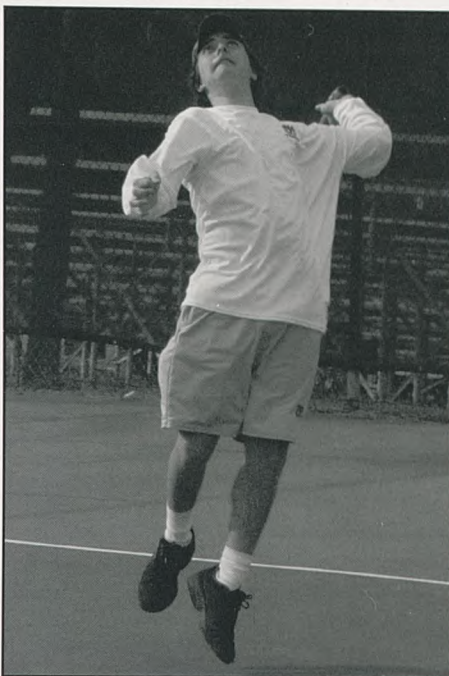

Finally, thanks very much to Coach Rutledge who came and supported the team at State and saw us win the title. We wish him a speedy recovery and all the best. Look out for MBA tennis next year as the Big Red looks to repeat as State champs.

Well -- there's Alec, Jim, and a few others who didn't quite make the Varsity Cross Country Team. It's quite a team, nonetheless!

This year's Junior Varsity Cross Country started a new tradition by traveling to the country-wide cross country championship in Aspen, Colorado. Building off the success of last year's terrific season (with star player Evan Shelby), the Ultimate Frisbee team for 2002-2003 decided to take on the world. International Youth Ultimate Frisbee League tournaments were held in every continent. Unfortunately, our team could only attend the contests at Japan, Scotland, and the North Pole. Be that as it may, the team, under the leadership of prolific athlete Roderick Russ and captain Cole Bourland, shined under the pressure of such steep competition. The Japanese are renowned for their disk hurling abilities.

In the Tournament for Tokyo, our frisbee-ers faced the onslaught of four, count 'em four, teams from the land of the Rising Sun: the Flying Fiji's, the Office Lady Omnivores, the Kimono Dragons, and the Kamikaze. To the chagrin of these four squads, the combined efforts of Paul Reynolds and Richard Howell, nicknamed the Duo of Death by the defeated Japanese, proved too much for the fledgling programs of the East. The team swept the people of the islands of all their frisbee dignity. But like Icarus, flying too close to the sun, the team left the country overconfident and in need of a wake up call in Scotland...

Deep in the murky fields of the University of Edinburgh, the team encountered their most vicious enemy--the Flaming Kilts of Glasgow. The Big Red was at this point no match for the experienced, battle hardened, and remorseless squad of skirt-donning scabs. They were defeated mercilessly 23-1, with one goal for the Big Red coming off an errant throw into a pole and surprising the unsuspecting arms of Will DeLoache. Nevertheless, the ensuing jig that the Scots performed after the game only further emphasized the domination of the Flaming Kilts over our beloved Big Red. The Scots mastery of the game was matched only by Obi-Wan Kenobi's mastery of the force, except the Scots were really, really unpleasant.

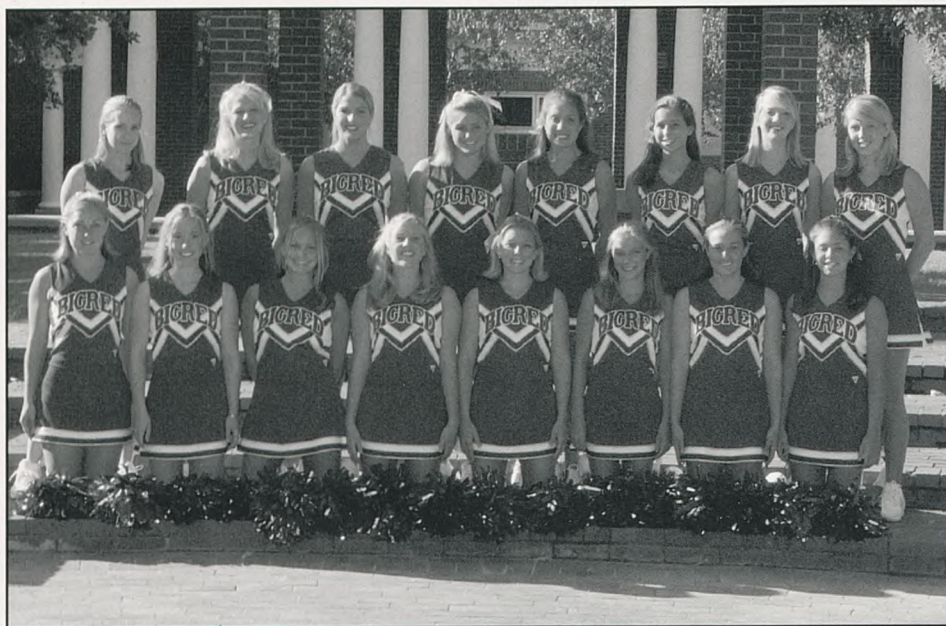

But the Big Red, dejected and disheartened, had one more shot to recover their former state of prestige--the famous Blarneystone of Scotland. This, of course, was not the real Blarneystone, but a cheap gas station imitation found in a Port-a-John along a winding road in the Highlands. After each member of the team humbled himself in the festering depths of the porcelain abyss, they found themselves rejuvenated and ready to take on the all that awaited them at the World Championship at the North Pole. They had lost their #1 seed in the tournament, but entered as a wild card after Poland was forced to forfeit after their country was destroyed by the conquering French.

Their early victories were quick and efficient, dispersing with the mediocre squads of the all-women Amazons of Brazil, the Daring Denizens of Djibouti, and the Papal Plates of the Vatican. The Big Red had one motivation: revenge on the Flaming Kilts. The latter as well had made short work of their early opponents and also eagerly awaited another match with the Big Red. Due to a brawl erupting in a local pub between the opposing fanbases, the Big Red were distraught to learn of the loss of their team mascot, Taylor Barnett who had managed to insult every single person in the pub in their respective languages. The brownies were no solace. The Big Red faced a difficult team in the Pirates of the Ivory Coast in the semifinals, but Brock Baker was simply too much for the dastardly sea dogs. The championship was set, for the Flaming Kilts had defeated the Defenders of the Adriatic from Venice. The stage was set for a rematch to be remembered in the volumes of Ultimate Frisbee lore...

They played in a blizzard on the following morning. The teams fought, traded leads, bruised, maimed, and gave wedgies, but no winner could be discerned by the thousands of onlookers at the end of the first half. The Flaming Kilts had been startled by the Big Red's determination but soon regained their composure, and what ensued included the most unspeakable horrors ever witnessed in an Ultimate Frisbee match. The winter storm intensified so that no man could see his own hands. The fierce battle was waged for hours on end, beyond the bounds of any previous frisbee match. Sudden death after scoreless sudden death continued until at last from the cloud of white did the crowd see one team emerge. They strode like kings, nay like gods, back to the sidelines. They spoke no words and explained not of how they had dispersed of the enemy. All of them bore a symbol across their arms. Amidst the clapping of hands and the gnashing of teeth, the team had branded themselves with the mark of a champion, the mark of victory, the mark...of the MBA waffle. The Big Red had risen victorious and redeemed.

ascending the ceramic stairs of Frist Hall to the art rooms, one discovers that, like most mottos, MBA's Gentleman, Scholar, Athlete signature is insufficient, that the Artist, though omitted, plays an important role in the life of the school. In the rambling, cluttered, sunlit studios of upstairs Frist, a community of Gentlemen, Scholars, Athletes, and Artists thrives, showing what young men can become artistically under the guidance of Jim Womack, Rosie Paschall, James Threalkill, Rashida Browne, and Catharine Hollifield. Though the following samples are from just a few of the Big Red's many artists, their work speaks for the spirit, talent, and discipline that the art program inspires.

BYE BYE BIRDIE

Bye Bye Birdie, MBA's fifth musical collaboration with Harpeth Hall, highlighted the new culture of 1950's youth. With standout performances by Hunter Mobley, Alvin Love, Richard Howell, Margaret Riley, Caroline Ramsey, Katie Tompkins, Gregory McCord, and Sarah Mayhan, the successful production proved the depth of musical talent present in both schools.

SLAUGHTERHOUSE 5

Dr. Fuller's direction of Kurt Vonnegut's classic novel Slaughterhouse Five emphasized the extent of torture in war through the chaotic journey of young Billy Pilgrim, Bailey Fish, and old Billy Pilgrim, Rob Delaney. Along with the three Billy Pilgrims, the remarkable performances of Timothy Vaughn, Sara Luton, Ben Newman, Josh Mayhew, and Wilson Garret showed the versatility of MBA actors.

KNIGHT OF THE BURNING PESTLE

Malcolm Morrison's direction of the Elizabethan farce Knight of the Burning Pestle illustrated the ability of the actors involved to comprehend Elizabethan English and perform it in a convincing, accurate, and hilarious accent. The over the top caricatures of Ben Pote, Katie Tompkins, Richard Howell, Timothy Vaughn, Rob Delaney, Paul Reynolds, Wesley Hughes, Ben Newman, and Doug Altenburn entertained all.

ONE ACTS

The student directed One Acts culminated a year of study and training in Dr. Fuller's Studio Theater class. Whitney Mills, Josh Mayhew, Wilson Garrett, Brian Christie, Paul Reynolds, Hunter Mobley, Richard Howell, and Timothy Vaughn directed seven unique, thought provoking, and humorous plays about the highways in life.

NATIONAL MERIT

This year, sixteen seniors were honored as National Merit Semifinalists based on their performance on the 2002 PSAT/NMSQT. National Merit Finalists were selected from the semifinalists through an application process, and fifteen of our seniors achieved this distinction. Finalists become eligible for scholarships from colleges, businesses, and the National Merit Corporation. An impressive forty-two members of the senior class were named as National Merit Commendees and Semifinalists for their high scores on the PSAT. Congratulations to those honored this year.

JUNIOR HONOR SOCIETY

The purpose of the Junior Honor Society is to recognize those students who have distinguished themselves academically during their early years at MBA. In order to be inducted into the society, a student must maintain an average of ninety or higher for three consecutive semesters at Montgomery Bell Academy. After six semesters have been completed in the high school, students are no longer members of the Junior Honor Society. Congratulations to those young scholars who were inducted this year:

2003 July 6, 3:26 A.M.

Being editor of the yearbook is without a doubt the most difficult responsibility that a student can take on at MBA. It requires organization, a competent and hard-working staff, and a dedicated leader who is willing to work throughout the year to ensure that deadlines are met and the book is released on time.

The Bell is a huge project. Hundreds of pictures are taken and must be sorted through, and it is unbelievably frustrating to find yourself in the yearbook room looking for junior school sports pictures in the early hours of the morning over a month after you've graduated. Pictures must be captioned, blurbs have to be written, and countless other menial tasks that are unnoticed by anyone who is not directly involved with the yearbook need to be done. But this is not to say that I have been the model editor.

I have not made a single deadline over the course of the year. My staff has consisted of largely two people -- Brian Elliott, the Senior Bios Editor, and Matthew Leftwich, the Clubs & Events Editor. Will Stringfellow, Bennett Graham, Jay Howell, and countless others have helped more than they can know, but the fact remains that the burden is one that must be shouldered by a few, at most.

I leave for India on July 16th. Your book will be finished by then.

Co-Editors-in-Chief Will Choppin and John Eason oversaw eight issues and a special football edition in the fifty-ninth volume of The Bell Ringer. In its first time to enter the state-wide competition sponsored by the Tennessee High School Journalism Association, the Bell Ringer placed third among the ninety or so newspapers which entered in the 2002-2003 school year. John Eason won a first-place award for feature articles. The tradition of senior wills and testaments was reintroduced in the final issue of the year. The Bell Ringer included a wide range of articles covering topics from the state football championship and new technological additions in the fall to the senior prank and a senior's retrospective in the late spring.

ARCHIVES

The biannual issue of Archives offers students an outlet for creative writing in a non-restricted arena. The literary magazine also publishes student artwork to accompany the writing pieces. Having spanned several decades, Archives continues to be the best representation of the students' creative writing skills. It is also generally good for student confidence to be able to publish one's own ideas, however foreign, and to be accepted and identified in that particular area of thought. This year the Archives experimented with issues inspired by dreams and the music of Radiohead. Hopefully the magazine will forever continue to provide students with a creative outlet for free thought outside academics.

This year, the Service Club was led by co-presidents Robert Foster and Matt Conrad. Senior leadership within the organization was also provided by Josh Cherry, David Boyd, and Jack Bryant. The Service Club worked on many of its usual projects this year, including Pulse Day, Soup Kitchen, Christmas Village, and the second annual Toy Drive. The organization also began a new project with Preston Taylor Community Center this school year. The Service Club raised money by running parking lots at Vanderbilt and Titans football games, thanks to the generosity of MBA board members who donated their property so that it could be used to park cars. By staying true to its motto "small service is true service," the Service Club successfully plays a vital role in connecting MBA to the surrounding community. The Service Club would like to thank Dr. Springer, Mr. Threalkill, Mr. Whitfield, Mr. Chenery and other faculty members who helped this year.

During the school year, students engage in weekly tutorials, sports, and other enriching activities.

RECYCLE MBA

Recycle MBA is an organization that recycles paper, cardboard, and aluminum cans on campus. Bins are located in many rooms in each building for students and teachers to store recyclables. When the bins are full, Recycle MBA members transport the recyclables to the maintenance shed. They are then transported to a recycling center. The group is led by junior Steve Vutsinas and faculty sponsor Mr. Spiegl.

The organization also sponsored public debates for other students to enjoy during their respective lunch period as well as assemblies. The discussions are guided by faculty advisor Mr. Coverstone.

ASTRONOMY CLUB

Unable to resist the temptation of tapping into Dr. Clark's vast knowledge of astronomy, Phillip Bracikowski organized the small, yet ample 2002-2003 Astronomy Club. Dr. Clark enthusiastically taught these four young men about the great universe beyond our planet earth. Favorite activities of the organization included star gazing and identifying constellations.

MATH COUNTS

MBA's Mathcrobes turned in an impressive performance in the 2002-2003 Mathcounts competition. The team began its run by winning first place in the Nashville competition. MBA placed five Mathcrobes in the top six in the individual competition: Kyle Davis (1st), Matthew Kimball (2nd), Jamie Fletcher (3rd), Chet Gormley (5th), and Will Hannon (6th). The Mathcrobes also brought home a first place trophy from the statewide competition. Individual award winners in the Tennessee competition were Jamie Fletcher (9th) and Kyle Davis (1st). ## MODEL UN

In November Montgomery Bell Academy students gathered with representatives from other high schools across Tennessee to participate in a model United Nations conference. One goal of the conference is to introduce the intricacies of international politics to high school students, so that they can experience the methods of the United Nations firsthand. Students represent a specific country and propose policies to benefit their nations.

The 2002 Homecoming weekend began on Friday evening with MBA's annual Spaghetti Supper, chaired by Nancy Gruber and Anne Tate. Later that night, MBA's Varsity Football team fell to Memphis University School by a heartbreaking score of 24-21. The Big Red would later use the loss as motivation in defeating MUS 20-14 in the semifinals of the state playoffs. The Student Council put together the Homecoming Dance, which took place Saturday night. A large number of high school students attended the event. Some even took the time to dance.

PROM

Montgomery Bell Academy held its annual prom on Saturday, April 12, 2003. The seniors enjoyed a fine meal in the Paschall Theater before heading over to the gymnasium for Senior Presentation. The junior class did a spectacular job at decorating the gym in accordance with the evening's Hawaiian theme. After presentation, the seniors joined the juniors on the dance floor. ## CAREER DAY

Each spring, seniors are given an opportunity to learn about a number of professions thanks to Career Day. This year featured Dr. Dave Alexander as the assembly speaker. He spoke to the student body about his career path and how he came to form his ideas about a profession. Following assembly, seniors broke into small career sessions and worked together with the Alumni Office to find alumni who represented a wide range of careers that interested the current students. Each senior attended two career sessions of their choosing and then attended the "value of an internship" session which was conducted by Vanderbilt's internship coordinator. Thanks to all the alumni who participated!

CELLOPHONY

MBA's second Cellophony featured spectacular music from Wesley Langlois, Hamilton Berry, Michael DeBruyn, Matt Hearn, and Matt Conrad. The group played covers of such artists as Radiohead and Neil Young, as well as some original compositions to a packed crowd in Paschall Theater. Proceeds went to the W.O. Each graduate received a $125 gift certificate to Best Buy in addition to gift certificates to various restaurants. The big winners of the night took home concert tickets to Lynyrd Skynyrd, an X-Box, a flatscreen TV, an Oriental rug, boots, and various other spectacular prizes. Gambling tables, pinball machines, and other games kept the party going until 5:00 A.M. Thanks to the parents, teachers, and sponsors who helped to make Project Graduation a success.

Junior School Dedication Mr. Roderick Russ

This year, the 8th grade class elected to dedicate the yearbook to Mr. Roderick Russ who teaches both Cultural Geography and US History. His dry sense of humor and his teaching style make a traditionally tedious subject surprisingly entertaining. Mr. Russ knows when to exercise discipline, and he knows when to let us make our own mistakes. He is also always there to help. Even though he is busy wrestling with two youngsters at home, we know that we can contact him at any time if we have a problem or a question, or we can just refer to his excellent website. He is not only a great teacher but also the 8th grade class chairman—the demerit keeper and organizer of class events, and overseer of activities like the Geo Bee and the Stock Market Game. The track and cross country runners, as well as the Ultimate Frisbee team, look forward to working with him in high school. On behalf of all the Junior School students, we'd like to thank Mr. Russ for his time, teaching and being a great role model for everyone.

COMMENCEMENT

The Class of 2003 walked across the main quadrangle of Montgomery Bell Academy on Thursday, May 29, 2003, as students for the final time. The bagpipe procession by Jay Dawson was followed by an invocation from Senior class president, Michael Kwas. Mr. Gioia commented on the origins of the Commencement ceremony as well as on his own personal experiences as headmaster of the school. Salutatorian Ben Newman and Valedictorian Peter Power both gave their respective speeches, followed by the remarks of Y.S. Chi, Chairman of Random House Asia. The ceremony ended with the class receiving their diplomas and with the final benediction. Students, friends, and families together celebrated the occasion with smiles, cigars, tears, and countless congratulations. The night was one that will forever remain in the hearts and minds of this year's graduates.

Below: The chorus rocks the house at graduation.

Right: The Class of 2003 were processing and recessing champs.

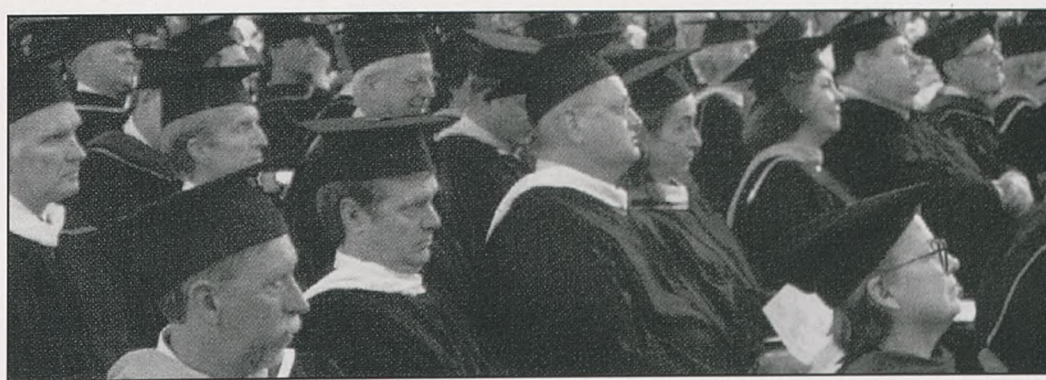

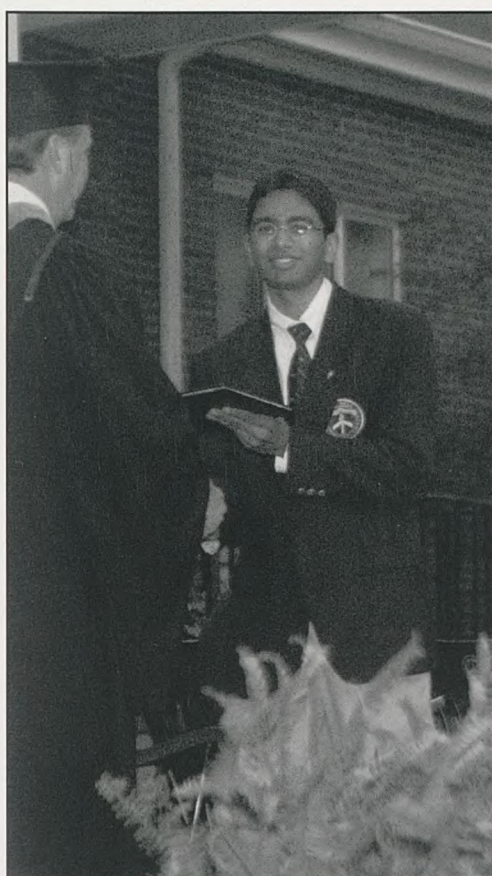

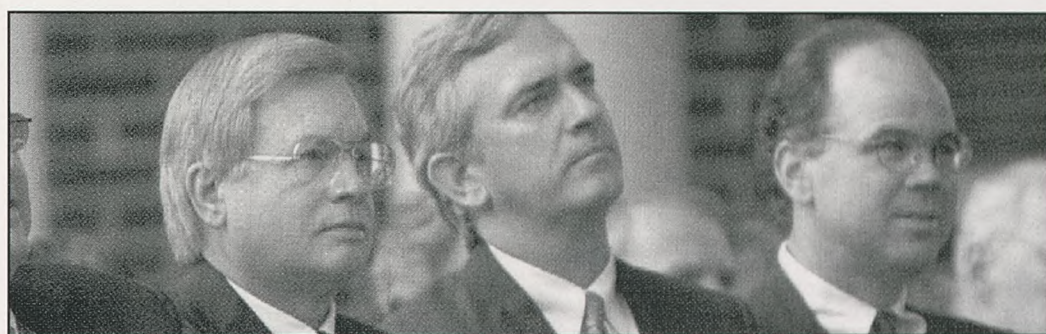

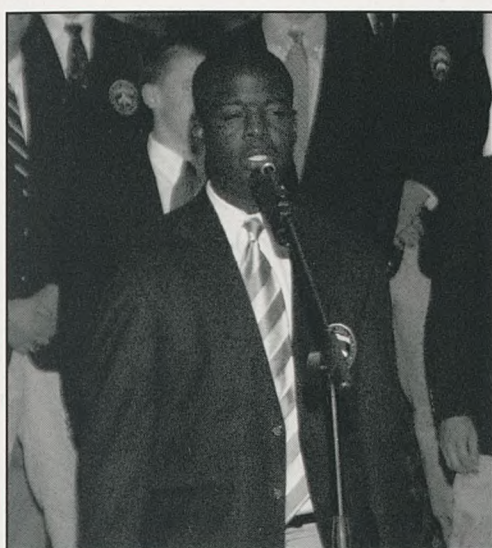

Far Right: Y.S. Chi's speech was interesting, thoughtful, and entertaining.

Hurry Go Round

--hide

frantic season blooms, always overflowing
the play repeats like that long time ago when the ivy has secretly grown its roots

the view in my eyes passes silently by

I head for a place far away leaving my memories as footsteps
it's not that I'm sorry but I'm not particularly happy

there was no way at that short time that I would find a meaning only brightness
running through yesterday

it's like a merry-go-round going round going round forgetting pain
I go ahead
still not knowing where to go

if you let me compare the bright fragrance of a mature fruit will quietly fade after colouring a season

ivy will intertwine
body will rot away
the piece of memory will return to the soil and a flower will grow again

like a merry-go-round & round
I'll see you again in the spring

the flowers I should have loved I didn't see then pointing their heads in the sunshine now gently smiling, going round & round twinkling in the fragments of memory even tears and rain are swallowed in the sand

hurry and go round
even if you're shattering
even if you're shredding your petals without bravery go round, hurry merry-go-round without waiting for the next moment

even if life is flooding you

I'll see you again in the spring
I'll see you again in the spring

What more is there to say?

I Hope You Dance

*I hope you never lose your sense of wonder.
You get your fill to eat, but always keep that hunger.
May you never take one single breath for granted:
God forbid love ever leave you empty handed:*

*I hope you still feel small when you stand beside the ocean.
Whenever one door closes, I hope one more opens.
Promise me that you'll give faith a fighting chance.
And when you get the chance to sit it out or dance,*

I hope you dance.

*I hope you never fear those mountains in the distance.
Never settle for the path of least resistance.
Living might mean taking chances, but they're worth taking.*

Loving might be a mistake, but it's worth making.

*Don't let some Hell bent heart leave you bitter.
When you come close to selling out, reconsider.
Give the heavens above more than just a passing glance.
And when you get the choice to sit it out or dance,*

I hope you dance.

Dance... I hope you dance.

*May you always have happiness, success, and the best that life has,
Every step of the way...*

Valedictory Address by Peter Power

Students, faculty, family, friends, and other guests, good evening. As we celebrate this commencement tonight and the rich tradition we call the Montgomery Bell experience, I think it appropriate that we not only reflect on our past efforts, memories, and achievements, but also take extra care to express our gratitude for all that we will take with us from this very special place. Montgomery Bell Academy has not only given us a superb education, but it has also instilled in us perseverance, self-discipline, and leadership, three qualities that are integral parts of being a "Gentleman, Scholar, and Athlete." While MBA forges these valuable attributes into the "finished products" we see on the football field at Tommy Owen Stadium on Friday nights or in a choral concert in the Paschall Theater on a Sunday afternoon, it is the daily, non-glorious events... such as writing a lab report or an English paper, doing line-drills in lacrosse practice, or volunteering for soup kitchen on a Saturday, which over a period of time have molded these three very important traits into each student's character. As we conclude another chapter in our lives tonight and begin a new one, we carry this spirit of perseverance, self-discipline, and leadership with us to meet the challenges that lie ahead.

Perhaps, the most valuable quality MBA has ingrained in me is how to persevere. Harry S. Truman, recalling an ancient Chinese proverb, wrote in his memoirs that being president "is like riding a tiger. A man has to keep on riding or be swallowed." He further commented that "a president either is constantly on top of events or, if he hesitates, events will soon be on top of him. I never felt that I could let up for a single moment." I believe that every student here tonight can sympathize with Mr. Truman's words. Being a student at MBA is very much like riding a tiger. If a student does not maintain control over his daily work and organize his time suitably, he will soon be overwhelmed by a tidal wave of homework assignments and tests. Throughout our MBA career my fellow classmates and I have often felt overwhelmed by rigorous academics, exhausting and time-consuming athletics, and a plethora of extracurricular activities. To hold true to a course of action, belief, or purpose without giving way is no easy task, yet perseverance permeates every aspect of the MBA community, whether in the classroom or on the athletic fields. Perseverance, like all moral virtues, is not innate, but must be learned through our successes, and more importantly, through our failures.

In addition to perseverance, our days at MBA have given us a sound foundation of self-discipline. Countless numbers of homework assignments and copious hours of hard work in athletic practice have entrenched self-discipline into our very souls. We have developed successful, everyday habits as a result of our self-discipline. As our class heads in many different directions this coming fall to over 60 different colleges and universities, we will soon discover that college is not simply a high school with bigger classes and greater academic demands. We will encounter more freedom than ever before; we will have the ability to think and act in whatever manner we choose. Our behavior from time to time will not reflect our intelligence, and Mr. Tillman will not be around to get us back on track. We will be entrusted with full command over the management of our time, the control of our appetites, and the attendance of our classes. The sense of self-discipline that we have developed at MBA will be instrumental in helping us make wise decisions that will shape our character for the rest of our lives.

Along with perseverance and self-discipline, leadership is at the heart of the MBA philosophy. The perseverance and self-discipline that we have learned as a result of our trials at MBA are essential qualities of leaders. Because we are blessed with such a diverse choice of interests from drama to ice hockey to foreign exchange programs, our range of leadership is not reserved for a select few. Instead, each one of us has the chance to lead in many different ways. I have always sought to lead by example, and I firmly believe that, by its very nature, true leadership carries with it the burden of being an example. May our examples as gentlemen, scholars, and athletes inspire others to embrace and embody these ideals. As leaders we will be summoned to confront the problems of tomorrow. With the leadership and knowledge that we have acquired through our education at MBA, we will be well equipped to formulate solutions — and to prevail over these ordeals.

In our search for perseverance, self-discipline, and leadership, we have also learned during our MBA career to strive always for excellence. It is in the quest for excellence that our perseverance, our self-discipline, our leadership, and our whole being are put to the test. As the poet Carl Sandburg once said, "All we need to begin with is a dream that we can do better than before. All we need to have is faith, and that dream will come true. All we need to do is act, and the time for action is now." Let us never flinch from the challenge and responsibility we have to transform our dreams of excellence into realities. I challenge all returning students and faculty to continue to renew MBA's tradition of perseverance, self-discipline, and leadership to achieve excellence. Though we know not what the future holds for any of us, we must not be consumed by our fears and anxieties. Rather, we must rise to the occasion, we must test our perseverance, our self-discipline, and our leadership as we endeavor for excellence, and we must continue to believe in our dreams. Thank you to our friends and classmates, to the teachers, staff, and administration, to our parents and relatives, and to all those voices and traditions in the community that have always encouraged us. What we have not done yet, may we strive to achieve in the future — and always with gratitude for the education and the principles Montgomery Bell Academy instilled in our lives.

Salutatory Address by Ben Newman

During the four years I spent as a student in Montgomery Bell Academy's upper school and a member of its crack extemporaneous speaking team, I attempted to write and deliver the perfect speech on more than five hundred occasions. Only a very few of those attempts carried me within any respectable distance of knowing what inevitably drastic alterations to my oratorical style I might have made—what further adaptations to the audience—that my intentions, so often mistaken, might have won the sympathy of an understanding judge.

Tonight, I stand the worst chance of delivering a perfect speech—whatever that means—that I have ever had to face. Are you the most critical audience that I have addressed in four years of competitive public speaking? No. Have I never spoken on a more difficult subject than the one I will expound this evening? No again—try fashioning an answer to the question of whether China's lately rapid economic growth will impede efforts to reform Japan's flagging economy, or responding with any intelligence at all to the innocuous prompt to devise a plan for Mideast peace. But these matters are distant from our purpose here, and you, faculty and students, friends, family, and members of the board, expect substance.

The trouble with you is that you are my friends. You are my grandparents. You are teachers who know me well and teachers from whom I have never had the chance to take a class. You are close associates of Montgomery Bell Academy, and you have never stepped foot on its campus until this evening. You have won state championships in football or track or tennis, and you have never played a varsity sport but instead spent your afternoons on stage or in the art studio. Tonight, you bid farewell these red-brick buildings. Tonight you attend your very first commencement ceremony.

In his timeless meditation upon the nature of civilization and savagery, Heart of Darkness, Joseph Conrad chose the word "restraints." One of his critics adopted the rather more nihilistic phrase, "sustaining illusions." Here at Montgomery Bell Academy, we call them "traditions" or, when we are bold, "worthy ideals becoming gentlemen." But whatever you choose to call them, this place, with its community so tightly-knit and yet its people of such impossibly divergent talents and experiences, represents an illusion of tradition and restraint to which each and every one of you, by your presence here this evening, contributes a bit of life, a bit of solidity, a bit of permanence. Allow me to explain.

After offering its students the most well-considered selection of academic courses and affording them the instruction of the finest teachers to be found at any school, after keeping the lights on and the air conditioning running, struggling to ensure that every infinitive remain unsplit and every participle firmly attached—after it satisfies these basic trappings of an education in one of the preeminent independent schools of this nation, Montgomery Bell Academy is an institution in the business of convincing you that whatever path you have chosen while a student here you owe not only to your own decisions but also to the hands that shaped you, that what you share with your classmates in the way of fond memories you necessarily share through the common lens of this place. There lies the illusion.

Do not take me for a critic: this business is in no way fraudulent; with what you make of the rest of your lives, you pay a very substantive debt to the education you have received. Tonight I strike only at the notion that the students and teachers assembled here may be considered parts of a whole that bears any simple definition. Never has there existed upon this hill a single, distinctive experience with which every student could identify. We, the class of 2003, have surely reaped the returns of that diversity. We were (and are) a class of individuals.

You have your crop of unextinguishable regrets, as Joseph Conrad would say, your train of modest victories, your priceless little knowledge of yourself. Soon, you will have a piece of paper that proclaims, "Yes, you attended Montgomery Bell Academy. Wasn't it all that you expected?" Let your parents treasure that token of your last years under their watch. For yourself, keep only what you've learned and the friendships you've made, and I believe a day will come when you look upon these years of your life and, if you are so inclined, recall the lyrics of Bob Dylan, "Ah, but I was so much older then; I'm younger than that now."

In the spirit of growing younger, I would now like to read a few lines from a favorite poem by Wallace Stevens entitled, "A Postcard from the Volcano."

*Children picking up our bones
Will never know that these were once
As quick as foxes on the hill;*

*And that in autumn, when the grapes
Made sharp air sharper by their smell
These had a being, breathing frost;*

*And least will guess that with our bones
We left much more, left what still is
The look of things, left what we felt*

At what we saw.
